Pleas M. Malcolm

Malcolm Dead at Age 63

Postmaster Pleas Matthew Malcolm, 63, died last night in the Missouri Delta Community Hospital at 11:30 p.m. of coronary thrombosis and other complications. He had been a patient in the hospital since Sunday.

Malcolm served as Sikeston's postmaster since August 9, 1939 and was a star football fullback player for the Sikeston Bulldogs from 1919 until he graduated in 1921.

A lifelong Democrat, Malcolm was a former Scott County treasurer, a former member of the county's Democatic committee and former advertising manager of the then twice-a-week Sikeston Standard.

Malcolm always credited his football learned lessons of fair play and temper control with his success as postmaster for 28 years tenure.

Malcolm continued playing football at Central College, Fayette, and Southeast Missouri State College at Cape Girardeau from which he graduated.

He saw Sikeston's mail volume increase four fold, postal receipts from $40,000 to $225,000 a year, the city's population from 5,676 to 13,765, and postal employes from 12 to 60.

Malcolm's post office serves 52 other Southeast Missouri postoffices as a sectional mail handling center.

He was born August 22, 1902 in Sikeston the son of Dr. Pleas M. Malcolm and Martha Jane Perry Malcolm. He was a member of the First Methodist Church and was serving on the board of Stewards and the men's Bible class of that church at the time of his death.

Malcolm was also a member of the National Association of Postmasters, the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce and was serving as president of the board of directors of a local radio station, which he helped establish.

September 2, 1964 the Associated Press ran a story about Malcolm saying, "Pleas Malcolm learned how to plow through the middle of the line, the importance of fair play and how to control his temper on the gridiron more than 40 years ago."

He always said his greatest irritation in life was delays in mail deliveries and the public relations problem of the post office, he said, was same as when he started:

"People think we are overpaid and underworked."

Survivors are his wife, Mrs. Virginia Sharp Malcolm, of the home, 113 Trotter Street, his son, Allen Malcolm of Overland Park, Kansas, a daughter, Mrs. Marjane Bullard of Jonesboro, Ark., five grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by a daughter, Virginia Ann Malcolm, who died December 28, 1962.

Funeral services will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. in the First Methodist Church with Reverends Joseph Wagner and Willard Spencer officiating.

Entombment will follow in the Sikeston City Mausoleum with the Nunnelee Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

To Survey Highway 25 At Malden

MALDEN -- An origin and destination traffic survey, featuring roadside interviews with motorists, will be made in the Malden area by the Missouri State Highway Department beginning Thursday, June 9.

Purpose of the survey, according to the Department is to gather information needed for long range state highway planning in the area.

Barring any delays that may be forced by weather conditions, the survey will be completed by Friday, June 17. No work is planned on Saturday or Sunday, June 11 and 12.

Motorists will be interviewed by two 6-man crews from the Department's Division of Highway Planning in Jefferson City. Art Wollenberg will be in charge of the crews.

Five interviewing stations will be set up on state highways in the Malden area during the survey. However, no more than two stations will be in operation at any one time. The stations will be open only during daylight hours.

Locations of the interviewing stations will be:

On Missouri Route 25 North, a little more than a mile north of Route J; on U. S. Route 62 East, about a mile east of Missouri Route 25; on Missouri Route 25, about a mile south of U.S. Route 62 East; on Route J, about a half mile west of Missouri Route 25; and on Route AB, about three-quarters of a mile southwest of Missouri Route 25.

All traffic will be stopped for interviews. Each interview is expected to take about one minute or less.

Questions to be asked motorists will include the origin and destination of their trip, purpose of the trip and where the vehicle is garaged. Notations also will be made of the type of vehicle, the direction of travel and the number of persons in the vehicle.

In seeking the co-operation of motorists, the Department emphasized that no names will be asked and no personal information sought. Data obtained will be combined to give an overall picture of state highway travel in the area.

Information gathered during survey will be taken to the Department's Main Office in Jefferson City to be processed and analyzed.

Third Attempt Lifts Gemini

Thomas D. Stafford

Eugene A. Cernan

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. AP -- The Gemini 9 pilots, smashing a 17-day jinx, rocketed into orbit today and skillfully tracked a target satellite in a 17,500-mile-an-hour chase across the skies.

After two heartbreaking scrubs, a mighty Titan 2 rocket launched astronauts Thomas P. Stafford and Eugene A. Cernan on a vital three-day flight that could bring the U. S. its second space triumph of a busy week.

As the space ship settled into orbit, the pilots went in hot pursuit of a tiny, barrel-shaped satellite launched Wednesday, hoping for a rendezvous with the target high over the Pacific Ocean early this afternoon.

After executing four major orbital changes with bursts of his jet thrusters, Stafford in the first 2 1'4 hours of the flight closed the distance to the target from 640 to about 125 miles.

He also had shifted the Gemini 9 path into almost a perfect circle 170 miles from the earth. At launch, the ship had gone into an orbit ranging from 99 to 172 miles.

"For the third time, go!" Stafford quipped as he sat in the spacecraft poised for the launch.

Just 31 hours after the Surveyor moonship landed softly on the lunar surface and sent back dramatic pictures of possible manned landing sites, the Titan propelled Gemini 9 aloft on a vital, three-day rendezvous and space walk mission.

The big Titan, with the rays of a bright sun glistening on its sides, rose slowly from its launch pad and sped out over the Atlantic Ocean, followed by a big white tail of vapor.

"We're right down the middle," flight director Eugene Kranz shouted.

"Everything," he told Stafford, "is green and go."

"We're on our way!" Stafford yelled exultantly. "It's fantastic."

To make today's launch possible, Stafford faced and overcame the same communications problem that forced Wednesday's shutdown 100 seconds before firing.

A radio guidance command that would have given the spacecraft precise steering directions failed to get through to its computer. This time, the decision was made to go ahead.

Shortly after the Gemini separated from its booster rocket, Stafford fired his jet thrusters to make necessary corrections in the orbit and plan of the space ship and put it on the desired path of pursuit.

Before returning to earth, the astronauts were to perform many of the maneuvers Apollo space men will make on round-trip journeys to the moon.

A year and a day after Edward H. White II became the first American to walk in space, Cernan was to climb out of the space ship Saturday and for 2½ hours hurtle through the skies as a human satellite.

A barrel-shaped target satellite -- fired into orbit Wednesday before a communications failure forced the second scrub of the Gemini launch -- flashed across the Cape as the Titan roared to life.

The 11-foot-long target satellite, a tiny dot in the vastness of space, was entering its 30th revolution of the earth as Stafford and Cernan began their hot pursuit.

They planned to close in on the quarry after a four-hour chase covering 75,000 miles.

With Cernan calculating the maneuver on a computer and Stafford firing the thrusters, the astronauts made a major shift 49 minutes after launching as Gemini 9 whipped high above Australia.

The move lifted the low point of their orbital course from 99 to 144 miles.

When the spacecraft started the chase, the target was 640 miles ahead. After the maneuver, the distance between the two vehicles was reduced to about 460 miles.

The Australian station also passed word that Gemini 9 was good for at least 15 orbits. This was one of three such decisions to be made during the flight after all aspects of the mission are evaluated.

Not until they were within eyesight of the satellite would the astronauts know whether a shroud protecting it from the heat and pressures of plastoff fell away when the target separated from its Atlas booster. If it had not, they would have to cancel plans for a linkup of the two orbiting vehicles, for the shroud covers the docking collar on the satellite. They would, however, be able to practice a

Three Injured

Three persons were injured in a car-truck district accident last night at 11:50 p.m. on highway 61, two miles north of Fruitland.

A 1959 Oldsmobile, driven by Ernest McKee, 44, St. Louis, drove across the centerline of the highway, into the side of a 1964 International truck, driven by James Wilson 23, Bloomfield.

The impact caused the tractor to leave the highway and overturn, but the trailer remained on its wheels.

McKee received a possible neck injury and cuts on the body, while the driver of the tractor-trailer received cuts on his head. Rudolf Reddick, 33, St. Louis, a passenger in the Oldsmobile, received cuts on his head.

Floyd Hicks Killed In Freak Accident

Floyd Hicks, 28-year-old greenskeeper at the Sikeston Country Club, was killed yesterday in a freak accident involving a soilgrinder, a tractor and a pulley belt.

Hicks, an employe of the club for the past four years, was found dead with his head laying directly against the machine by 15-year-old Charles "Chuck" Meyers at 2:30 p.m.

Meyers had been working with Hicks until the tractor began getting overheated. Meyers went to the club for a pail of water and returned 10 minutes later to find Hicks the victim of the accident.

Hick's death was attributed to a broken neck after being crushed through the pulley.

After Meyers found the body, he ran to the pro shop and got the club golf pro, Gene Dawson. Dawson had his wife call an ambulance. He and Meyers went back to the scene of the tragedy in a golf cart. Dawson said about 10 minutes later the ambulance arrived and the driver said Hicks was dead.

Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Fielding Potashnick said there would be no inquest.

Hicks, who resided at the corner of Smith and Fourth Streets, is survived by his wife, Darla, daughters, Starla and Lauretta, all of the home and daughter Cathy of Buffalo.

Other survivors include: his mother, Mrs. Laura Lewis of Sikeston; six brothers, Haywood and Marion Hicks, both of Elkland, Jim Hicks of Orville, Washington, Lloyd and Roy Hicks, both of Sikeston and Harold Hicks of Sacremento, Calif., five sisters, Mrs. Irene Osburn, Charleston, Oregon. Mrs. Ethel Sanders of Elkland, Mrs. Abbie Price of Springfield, Mrs. Edna Penn of Bay City, Mich., and Mrs. Norma Hays of Marshallfield.

Services are set for Sunday at 3:30 p.m. in the North Street Pentecostal Tabernacle with Rev. Freeman Parker officiating. Interment is to follow in the Garden of Memories cemetery with the Nunnelee Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Two File for Stoddard County Judgeship

BLOOMFIELD - Two persons have filed for the Democratic nomination for presiding judge of the Stoddard County Court since the filing period was reopened because of the death of Presiding Judge John Kleffer.

Ben Vaughn, Dexter, former associate judge, has filed; and Bill Poeppelmeyer, Bloomfield, has also filed, according to the records of the County Clerk.

Both will be opposing Clyde Henson, former County Court judge and a former County Clerk. Henson was in the race with the late Judge Kleffer, when Judge Kleffer was seeking another term, but died early last week.

According to Missouri law, when such a death occurs, the filing period is re-opened for a period of five days to permit other candidates to file. This period ended at 5 p.m. Friday, officers at the County Clerk's office said.

Social Security Benefits Increase

WASHINGTON AP -- President Johnson proposed today a blanket increase in Social Security benefits for all those on the rolls now and those who will be in the future. He mentioned no specific figures.

Johnson said he has directed Secretary of Welfare John Gardner to have a program for increased benefits ready for the next session of Congress.

And the President promised the increases would have "a high and major priority."

Johnson's pledge to strive for higher Social Security benefits was made in a White House speech to delegates to a convention of the National Council of Senior Citizens.

Johnson told the delegates that while he has signed into law increases of more than $1.5 billion a year in Social Security benefits, "too many of our older citizens are still struggling along on shoestring incomes, suffering real hardship and real need."

Americans spent $600 million for musical instruments last year and bought over a billion dollars' worth of books.

CHEERFUL TEMPER

In the old Farmer's Almanack, June 1849, it was written, "Perhaps no month tends more to promote a cheerful temper than the present." Now the green tide is at its height; now the hillsides glow with green-gold hues beneath the high-climbing sun; now the meadows are lush with their green and flower-dotted quilts."

This is indeed a season of cheerful temper. The dawn chorus is still strong and exhuberant, and through sun-blessed days the orioles whistle from the elms and barn swallows twitter as they bring nest-building materials to the rafters. Catbirds take time from home construction to sit on garden fence posts and alternately jeer and commend a man as he hoes his potato patch.

Nature has her moods -- even as man. Now when the first rush of spring's urgency is over, one can feel the cheerful temper of the season. Daisies star the meadows; iris still wave flags in the swales; cattails lift slender, pointed leaves around the swamps.

Each day brings us nearer the solstice -- that day of longest daylight when probably more flowers are open than on any other day of the year. This is a time to savor the beauty of the countryside, to walk sun-dappled woodland aisles and to explore the lowlands.

When one stands at meadow-edge or on an upland field and watches the green-gold grass waves ripple ahead of a breeze on a sun-drenched spring day, he knows that this is truly a month of cheerful temper.

THE NEWS SIDE

Editors supervise the work of various departments in the news gathering side. In medium to large newspapers, the editor is assisted by managing editors, city editors, sports editors, social editors, and wire editors, who handle the national and international news sent to the newspapers over the teletype machines. The larger the newspaper, the greater the need for more specialists. On a metropolitan newspaper, for example, you might find experts on entertainment, education, industry, finance, religion and science.

"Slow Down and Live."

"The life you save may be your own."

"Drinking Drivers Die."

These broad, emotional appeals are typical of the traffic safety effort in America.

Considering the traditional practicality which is a legacy to American society from its pioneer forbears, perhaps an appeal also should be made to the driver's business sense.

That's what Iowa authorities did. They conducted a test in Polk County (Des Moines), issuing reflective "safety" license plates to 60 per cent of the automobiles. They kept records for a year to see if the cars with reflective plates were involved in fewer accidents than cars with ordinary painted plates.

They were. In fact, the study indicated that if reflective tags had been issued for all cars, they would have prevented losses totalling from $166,000 to $372,000 (depending upon whether you used minimum or maximum figures to compute accident-cost estimates) in damage, death and injury that resulted from the nighttime accidents involving vehicles with ordinary painted plates.

It would have cost $25,000 to reflectorize all license plates issued in Polk County. The return on that $25,000 investment, then, would have been 664 to 1488 per cent.

Motorists were told the outcome of the study. As a result, they showed their business sense by supporting a bill for reflective license plates.

The typical cost of reflectorizing a set of license plates is 50 cents. That 50 cents could save your life. According to the Iowa study, this is the kind of investment that makes sense.

Reflective plates glow from as far away as 2,000 feet in headlights. As a result, they prevent many rear-end collisions involving slow-moving, disabled or parked cars. Seventeen states and the District of Columbia have adopted such tags.

It cost Florida only five cents to reflectorize 1965 plates. That's the amount of the increase in registration fee.

However, Florida is reflectorizing only letters, numerals and border on one plate. Later, says Arch Livingston, Commissioner of the Motor Vehicle Commission, the legislature expects to reflectorize the entire plate and raise the registration fee 12 cents.

By then, Livingston expects such general public approval of reflective plates that there will be little or no opposition to an extra 12 cents.

Livingston believes that Florida motorists will recognize a good investment when they see one. The big question now is: Why don't more states make sound investment in traffic safety, with such plates or any other device that has proved it can save dollars. And lives.

Representative George H. Mahon, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, writes in Nation's Business: " . . . Somebody has to draw a line between what the country stands in need of and what it can afford. We should make a sharper distinction between our wants and our needs than we have done in the last 15 or 20 years. We are too readily inclined to make yesterday's wants today's needs. A great problem in government finance these days is that not enough of us lie awake nights worrying about the fact that we are spending beyond our income . . ."

Now that civil war has hit Uganda and put that nation on the map in a gory way, it is noted that few reporters have spent time there and fewer still have been in the palace of the Kabaka, king of the Buganda.

However, of those very few who realized the importance of that far-off land and of the fewer still who ever talked to the Kabaka in the very palace which was under heavy assault the other day, our columnist Victor Riesel stands out.

Riesel knows the king. The columnist first filed stories from Kampala, capital of Uganda, on August 7, 1959.

At that time, Riesel trekked into Kampala from Eastern Africa to cover the virtually unknown Kampala Labor College there. This trade union college still turns out labor leaders who will head the unions of Africa, which in turn have so much political influence.

I. L. O.'s 50TH SESSION

The International Labor Organization, like most specialized agencies of the United Nations, is little known and often misunderstood. Right-wingers think of it as an instrument of the worldwide Communist conspiracy, while others assume it is some sort of trade-union federation. It is neither, and much more.

I. L. O. was created at the Paris Peace Conference in 1919 to help the working people whose lives and hopes had been shattered by World War I. Although I. L. O.'s first session was held in Washington, with Samuel Gompers in attendance, the United States did not become a member until 1934. Today, this country provides one-third of the organization's budget. And the director general of I. L. O. since 1948 has been David A. Morse, a former U. S. Under Secretary of Labor.

Industrialization heads the agenda of the 50th session of I. L. O. scheduled to begin at Geneva on Sunday, June 5. Other questions include old-age and survivors' pensions, and the role of cooperatives in the economic and social development of developing countries. Previous sessions have produced close to 250 conventions relating to labor conditions.

Delegations to I. L. O. sessions consist of one employer representative, who in this country usually is nominated jointly by the National Association of Manufacturers and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, one labor delegate, nominated by the A.F.L. - C.I.O.; and two government delegates, one from the Labor Department and one from the Commerce Department. George Cabot Lodge, who served as chairman of the 1960 session, has described I.L.O. as "the only organization created to deal with those problems which are most real to the majority of the people in the world: work, wages, security, and the right to freedom and dignity."

NEW YORK AP -- If a man walks into an art museum with a knife and slashes a priceless oil painting into canvas confetti he nets a jail term or at least a stretch on the psychiatirc couch.

But if the same man cuts the heart out of a literary classic by abridging, expurgation, revising or rewriting he nets a fair sum of money.

How come?

Why is it wrong to "improve" a Rembrandt painting by adding a little touch of color but to sin to revise and rewrite A. A. Milne's classic "Winnie the Pooh" becasue you think Milne took too long to say what he had to say?

There's no quick answer, but that doesn't make it right. And the literary lady who announced recently that she planned to remake Pooh and Piglet and Owl and the rest of Milne's characters in her own image is asked to forget it.

Pooh is Pooh or, to coin a paraphrase, IS NO Pooh at all.

It was bad when they made Fagin into a nice guy in a musical comedy. And it was worse when they slashed the glorious thunder from Melville's "Moby Dick" on the ground it interferred with the story's action.

But to kill Christopher Robin? Intolerable!

Why this desire to change things of value? "Brevity," say the changers, "clarity, modernizing."

But not beauty. They always forget beauty.

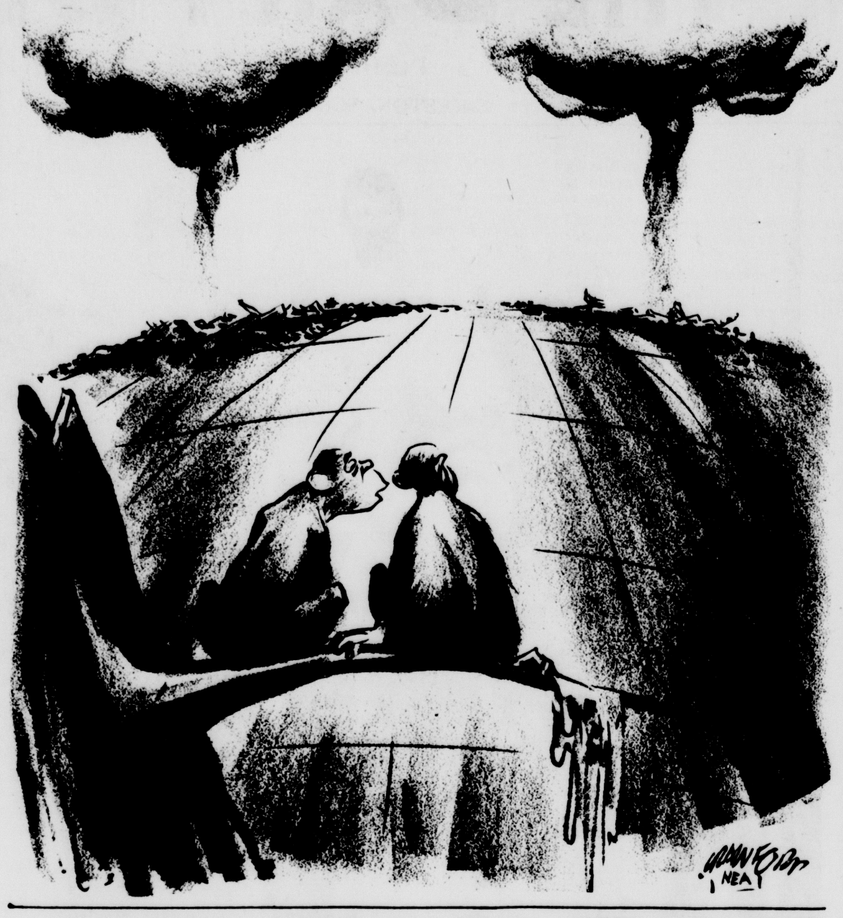

Who would remember the Gettysburg Address if Lincoln had begun with "Eighty-seven years ago?"

How about changing it from "In the beginning God, etc." to "First God, etc.?" Or, how about "These things are obvious" rather than "We hold these truths to be self-efident?"

Those who prefer the changes ought to be made to write on a blackboard 500 times: "Oh, Lord my God, I am heartily sorry for having offended thee."

But they'll probably write: "Sorry about that."

THE NAVY SAYS " WELL DONE"

The American merchant marine has been given the Navy's traditional accolade for superior performance -- "Well Done". Back of this lies a significant story.

A short time ago, an assault landing exercise, given the name Steel Pike, was held in southern Spain. All in all some 50,000 men, including 28,000 Marines, participated and huge quantities of equipment and supplies were involved. The Marines had to be able to fight and advance for a full 30 days in enemy territory.

Ninety naval vessels were employed. Along with these, 10 merchant ships, of which eight belong to members of the Committee of American Steamship Lines, were chartered.

When the exercise was ended, the commander of the Navy's amphibious forces wrote a letter to the executive director of the Committee in which he said the merchant marine's participation was "an integral and critical element" necessary to the success of the operation, and that the ships' . . . performance proved decisively that they have 'made the team'."

This high praise was thoroughly earned. The 10 U.S. flag merchant ships, plus a flotilla of Military Sea Transportation Service vessels, carried 90,000 measurement tons of cargo from five U.S. ports 4,500 miles to Spain in a 10-day crossing. And the "new breed" of CASL line freighters, capable of speeds of 19 to 25 knots or better, also provided comfortable living quarters and other facilities for hundreds of Marines of the 2nd Division.

This just touches the highlights of the story. But it shows that our own merchant marine is essential to the national defense as well as to our economic well-being.

OKAY TO STEP ON GAS

America's romance with the automobile is of too long a duration for everyone suddenly to begin believing that everything is wrong with everything about Detroit's leading product.

Recent attacks on the industry have had a telling effect on the public, however. Doubtless anyone who has ever owned a car has been reminded of instances where he paid good money for a vehicle which exhibited something less than care and craftsmanship in its design and construction.

One company's reaction to vociferous critic Ralph Nader-investigation of his private life and even attempted entrapment of him in situations of doubtful morality - left more taste of lemon in mouths than anything that was ever allowed to roll off an assembly line.

Thus it is gratifying to see the four major manufacturers abandoning a pose of outraged innocence and the plea that they be allowed to police themselves and to come out with positive support of national safety standards.

The industry wants a primary role in the writing of these standards, which seems reasonable enough. It wants the 50 states to have a voice, which does not seem quite so unreasonable. It also wants to water down the power that the administration's bill would give to the secretary of commerce to set safety standards, which seems unreasonable pending further clarification.

But at least recognition has been given to the fact that American automobiles are not as safe as they could be. With continued candor and co-operation between Detroit and Washington, there is no reason why the engineers and lawmakers cannot conjointly arrive with all due speed at a safety formula which will eliminate some of the tragedy which too long has been associated with the great American love affair.

THE FIVE SALESMEN PROBLEMS:

The great problems of the selling profession can be boiled down to five, according to Whiting's study of a New York Sales Executives Club:

Salesmen fail to organize their day's work.

They don't think creatively to solve their own or their customer's problems.

They don't know how to answer objections.

They can't motivate themselves.

They lack the ability to communicate effectively.

Apparently there is one thing all parties and peoples both rich and poor, high and low agree on. that is that the inefficient, irresponsible officeholders should be relieved of the job of dispensing taxpayer's money. it has reached the point that taxpayers money could be called blood-money. looks like in many instances its being handled like it was confederate currency, or post-war German marks, got to be some changes made.

H. L. Hunt Says

DIVIDE TO CONQUER?

Language is an indispensable tool of communication. It can also be used as a weapon of abuse, to mislead, create wrong impressions and induce false thinking. The word weapon is less immediately destructive than some weapons, but it has tremendous power to erode our freedom and sovereignty.

Freedom's enemies have been masterfully trained in the art of the twisted phrase, subtle implication, innuendo, the half-truth useful in inciting dissension between races, classes and religious groups for the purpose of dividing this country's citizenry. The enemy knows that a great part of America's strength lies in the diversity and variety of its people. Jewish people, Negro citizens, Protestants, Catholics, those of English, French, German, Polish or Czech origin, all have contributed to the greatness of this land. Communism, which has never been able to match the strength generated in this free country by these free people, must first divide and splinter that strength before it can undermine their freedom.

Organizations with noble-sounding titles have been set up which charge patriots with being anti-Semitic and anti-union-labor. These organizations make a practice of offering the name of one person as being in some way connected with another to prove that both are guilty of anti-minority prejudice and practice when, in fact, neither has ever been known to have engaged in anti-Semitic or other "anti" practices or utterances.

Accusing patriots of being anti-Semitic is a favorite weapon of the enemy, who fear the strength this country draws from the resourcefulness, ingenuity, industry, good business practices and dedication to independence of its Jewish citizens more than any of its other assets.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Republican congressmen attempted to put the Democrats in the position of defending the liquor lobby when 30 energetic house members acted to raise the drinking age in the District of Columbia from 18 to 21, thereby making it coincide with the drinking age in Maryland and Virginia.

Hilliard Schulberg, chief lobbyist for the Washington Retail Liquor Dealers Association, is now busy buttonholding Democrats to try to overrule the Republican amendment. He calls increasing the drinking age from 18 to 21: "A monster - economically, morally, and socially bad."

Spearheading the Republicans who wanted to remove the nation's capital as a mecca of teenage drinking were William Harsha, Ohio, Thomas Pelly, Wash., William Bray, Ind., William Springer, Ill., Ancher Nelsen, Minn., and H.R. Gross, Iowa. Charles Joelson of New Jersey was the only Democrat who actively supported them.

Joelson declared: "The state of New York has an 18-year-old age limit, and we in New Jersey have a requirement of 21 years. The youngsters go to New York City and are involved in horrible automobile accidents. There is a tragedy almost every weekend; let us here in the nation's capital learn from bitter experience."

Minnesota's Nelsen had introduced a bill two years ago to change the drinking law in the nation's capital, but Democrats on the District of Columbia committee bottled it up.

Said Rep. Pelly of Washington state: "I have occasion every week to watch these cars that are driven by young people with Virginia license plates who come over and park around the various residential neighborhoods. They come late at night and leave empty beer cans and bottles on our parking strips."

Said Rep. Harsha: "The nation's capital has become an oasis for juvenile drinking. . . Youths of both sexes shout oaths and profanity, smash car windows, break neighborhood fencing. Beer bottles are thrown through house windows. Autos and motorcycles race up and down district streets. There is loud blowing of horns in the early hours of the morning, street fighting, in other words, a general disturbing of the peace and quiet in the District of Columbia."

It will be interesting to see what the Democrats, who control both the House and Senate District committees and both houses of congress do about the Republicans' "Head Start" program for teenagers in the nation's capital.

NO DODDISM HERE

No matter what the Senate Ethics committee may do regarding Sen. Tom Dodd, D-Conn., the publicity regarding his activities is already having its effect.

Not only has President Johnson sent a proposal to congress regarding the regulation of campaign funds, but the other day in Springfield, Ill., Harry G. Taylor, President of the Illinois Republican County Chairmen's Association, clearly indicated that he had been reading the columns regarding Tom Dodd.

Reported the Illinois State Register: "Drew Pearson's and Jack Anderson's column you have been reading in the Register about Sen. Thomas J. Dodd's alleged misuse of campaign funds have the entire congress of the United States shaken up.

"At the $50-a-plate fund raising dinner in Decatur Sunday night, Harry G. (Skinny) Taylor went to great lengths to explain how the money would be used.

"He said Thomas Harris of Lincoln, Republican state committeeman, would appoint a committee to distribute the funds. One of the committee members will be a certified public accountant.

" 'I think it should be known that none of the funds received by the committee will be used for any personal expenditures of congressman Springer,' Taylor said."

BIG MONEY TALKS

Senate campaigns are not the only place where the big money talks big.

It also talks big in influencing some of the pipeline cases which affect gas and oil to millions of housewives and thousands of factory owners.

It's difficult for newspapermen to dig out the facts on all these cases, but in regard to El Paso Natural Gas, the company which supplies gas to most of California, here are some of the fees paid to high-powered attorneys to maintain El Paso's near monopoly:

Sullivan and Cromwell, the Wall Street firm of the late John Foster Dulles, was paid $946,645.54 for its legal work before the Federal Power Commission and the U. S. Courts.

Nixon, Mudge, Rose, Guthrie and Alexander, the New York firm of former Vice President Richard Nixon, was paid $77,629.20.

G. Bentley Ryan, the Los Angeles attorney who raised money for Mayor Sam Yorty's testimonial dinner, was paid $254.61.

All these are legal fees and are a matter of record, filed with various government agencies. Not of record are the fees paid by El Paso to Clark Clifford, the adviser to presidents and now under consideration to be under secretary of state for LBJ; or the fee paid by Clifford to Larry L. Williams, formerly of the antitrust division, who handled the El Paso case for the justice department. Williams formed the Clifford law firm after he left the justice department.

It's significant that thanks to the tenacity of one underpaid California servant, William M. Bennett of of the California Public Utilities Commission, all of these lawyers were beaten.

Bennett stuck to his guns, persisted in appealing various lower court rulings to the supreme court and has won. Bennett receives a salary of only $26,000 a year from the state of California.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Senate Racket Probers Dig Into $85 Billion Pension Funds.

Washington, D. C.: -- Even in this capital today, $85 billion is considered a fair amount of cash to have on hand.

That's about what there is in the private labor - management pension funds at the moment and Sen. John McClellan, the other gentleman from Arkansas, is making a long and anguished appraisal of how this money is being handled, invested and spent.

The Senator's sensitivity to rackets and his proclivity to "busting" them is sharper than ever.

His chief of staff, Jerry Adlerman, and two experienced probers have just returned from New York where they did some muckraking amongst lost millions.

The national atmosphere is acrid with gunsmoke of two San Francisco area murders which have created a pension and welfare mystery on the Coast.

There is looting in several other cities.

Here in the East at least one fund totaling some four to five million dollars was slowly being transplanted into Swiss and other foreign -- and unreachable -- banks when Sen. McClellan stopped the gold flow.

But the latest racket investigation is scalpeling into pension cash controlled entirely by employers.

Generally the public believes all such funds are administered by a joint management- labor board of trustees. Not so.

Of some 34,500 such retirement benefit plans, many thousands are run by unions alone or by corporations. Amongst the latter are those handled by the big auto and steel firms. They are unimpeachable.

From time to time the unions, such as Walter Reuther's auto workers, bid for joint administrative authority.

And there are thousands of retirement funds which are handled exclusively by smaller firms. These systems have assets in the billions, though individually they total anywhere from a million to 20 times as much.

Mr. McClellan's investigators for some time now have secretly been examining the unethical fringe of the employer -- controlled "fringe benefit plans."

In New York the probers have been going over the books of some companies which put their contributions to employes' pension funds into the stock market.

Money is made by company executives through a simple racket.

They buy securities on the open market. Then they sell the shares to the pension fund at a higher price. And they pocket the difference.

Since the funds run into the millions, tens of thousands of shares can be picked up and resold to the pension fund at a sizeable profit per share. In effect, this lowers the coverage of the firms' workers, who are entitled to top benefits the pension money can buy them.

The firms' contributions are not made voluntarily. These are negotiated as part of the union contract but are handled by the company executives.

There is another angle to the stock manipulation.

Some firms have been buying their own public stock to support its price on the open stock exchanges. Thus when the price has run down, the firm, if unethical, will take the pension money and buy heavily to support it.

The executives with big portfolios will then unload at the higher price. The losers are the workers because the pension fund's cash is depleted and the stock generally is shaky.

For years now the Securities Exchange Commission and the Internal Revenue Service have been watching such developments. But their authority gets hemmed in by the legal maneuvers of the unethical operators.

So Sen. McClellan has taken some out of the rackets probes -- which are still on the back burners -- to rip open these muck packs.

Hr's heading for a public hearing this fall.

The racket buster's objective is to block any proliferation of legal looting on either side of the labor - management field.

Few are aware that the pension funds accumulate at the rate of over $4 billion annually. In 10 years, as the current 25 million workers now covered increase, there is to be at least $170 billion in the funds. This is worth protecting.

The Labor Dept.'s theorists and realists agree. Under Secy. of Labor Wirtz' direction they have alerted all fund administrators that they will be expected to give considerably more details in future reports to the government.

The expanded filing will have to show a more detailed breakdown of the insurance premium dollar, acturial data on which premiums and benefits are based, and complete listing of assets and liabilities, and a changed method of reporting inflow and outgo of money.

That's all to the good. Men may not live by bread alone.

But they will live more comfortably if they know that the money intended for their bread and butter in their old age is being safeguarded.

Carol Britton, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Junior bridesmaids were Sheryl Lemmons, sister of the bride, and Patsy Gregg, daughter of the groom. The attendants wore dresses styled after the bride's but in white over pink. Their headpieces were pillboxes covered with self - fabric and straw and chin - length veils. They carried nosegays of rose chrysanthemums.

Morris Gregg of Dexter, the groom's cousin, was best man. Danny and Kenny Gregg, sons of the groom, were junior escorts.

The bride's mother wore a blue lace sheath and a blue straw hat. She wore blue gloves, white shoes and a corsage of pink carnations.

The reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Lynn, 123 Baker Lane. The bride's table was covered with a white linen cloth and centered with a large three tier cake topped with a miniature bridal couple. A silver punch bowl, candelabra and mint dishes also appointed the table. Greenery and pink carnations were used in decorating.

Serving at the reception were Mrs. Margaret Lynn, Mrs. Cleatus Lemmons, and Mrs. Barbara Glover. Miss Betty Reed was in charge of the guest book.

Yancey Leads Memphis Open Golfers

MEMPHIS, Tenn. AP -- Perhaps Bert Yancey should have saved that remarkable round for another day.

The 27-year-old pro fired a seven-under-par 63 in the first round of the $100,000 Memphis Open Golf Tournament Thursday. That matched the Colonial Country Club course record and pushed him into a three-stroke lead.

But Yancey will be fighting history -- as well as the tough field of challengers -- the rest of the way.

For in the eight previous Memphis Opens, no first-round leader has wound up champion.

Some of the better known pros, including defending champion Jack Nicklaus, are at least seven strokes back. Nicklaus had a 72, Gary Player and Gay Brewer had 70s, Ben Hogan 71, and Julius Boros, Johnny Pott, Tommy Bolt and Joe Campbell 72s.

Bert Yancey attributed most of his success to his putting, but all of his game was solid yesterday in a round of 63 that gave him the lead on the first day of the Memphis Open golf tournament.

The blond Philadelphian discovered the putting touch early and he used only 28 putts for the day. "I knew at the third hole I was putting well and I could have had a 62 as easily as a 63, I thought I had it on No. 9 (his 18th hole)."

Yancey's 63 tied the Colonial Country Club competitive course record and his birdie putt for a 62 on the final hole slid only inches off the mark. He shot his first nine (Colonial's back nine) in four-under-par 32 and finished with a three-under-par 31.

Thirty members of the 144-man field broke par in the opening round of the $100,000 tournament. Thirteen more were at par 70.

Bob Charles, the New Zealand lefthander, put a 66 on the board and led for four hours. Three others -- Dale Douglass, Gene Littler, and Wright Garrett -- later joined Charles at four under par. A half dozen were at 67, four were at 68, and 15 were at 69.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus, stricken by a triple bogie five holes out, finished at 72. Don January, three under and a threat at one point, carded a triple bogie and had a 71. The triple bogies were brought on by out-of-bounds shots, Nicklaus' on the 14th hole and January's on the seventh.

Rod Funseth set a fast pace early in the day, going 11 holes in five under par, but a double bogie and two bogies gave him a 69. Mason Rudolph of Clarksville, Tenn., shot his first nine holes in three-under par, but bogied 10,11,13 and 14, finishing the back nine with a 40 for a 71 total.

Cary Middlecoff of Memphis shot even par.

Many in the record first-day gallery of 10,283 fell in behind the threesome of Littler, Ben Hogan and Bert Weaver. Littler had won the Wednesday pro-am with a 63 and shot that and three strokes more yesterday. Hogan started well (33) but ended with a 38 for 71. Weaver shot 72.

For a time Yancey had competition from the other members of his threesome. Don Massengale went through 14 holes three under par, but bogied six, seven and nine for a 70. Jim Ferree was one under through 14 but finished at 71.

"Many times the very fact you are playing well breaks your concentration," Yancey said, "But I managed to ward off that problem."

Cards Held To 7-Hits, Lose 2-0

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Those lowly A's continued their uprising against the American League leading Indians Thursday night, battering Cleveland for 14 hits and an 11-4 victory that lifted them into ninth place.

Ralph Terry received credit for the victory, his first against three losses, but needed help from Lew Krausse over the last three innings. Terry yielded 7 hits and one run and Krausse was charged with three hits and three runs.

Campy Campaneris, who had been hospitalized since Wednesday night with a muscle spasm in his back, returned to the line-up to pace the attack with two singles, a double, triple and two stolen bases.

In St. Louis pitchers Don Sutton and Ron Perranoski combined efforts to set the Cardinals down on 7-hits as the Dodgers posted a 2-0 shut-out.

West Parker singled home the Dodgers first run in the fifth and Al Ferrara drove in the second in the seventh on a punch-hit single. Nelson Briles was the Card loser.

Curt Flood had three hits for St. Louis and Tim McCarver got two. The Cards left eight men on base and the Dodgers 10.

Los Angeles now has won nine of its last 10 games.

The A's pummeled four Cleveland pitchers. Starter Gary Bell was the victim of record, suffering his second loss against four victories.

Mike Hershberger got three hits and drove in three runs and Dick Green and Ken Harrelson had two hits apiece and each drove in two runs.

Kansas City's biggst inning was the seventh when the A's sent five runs across the plate. A principal victim of the inning was Dick, The Monster, Radatz, the 260-pound relief artist acquired by the Indians only a few hours earlier from Boston.

Radatz led off by walking Krausse, Campaneris doubled, and then followed two more hits and three bases on balls and the big righthander went to the showers.

Tonight the A's open in Baltimore with Jim Hunter scheduled to start against Jim Palmer of the Orioles.

St. Louis moves to Atlanta where Bob Gibson will be called on in hopes of returning the Cards to the victory column against Hank Fischer and the Braves.

Dean Oliver Leads Rodeo Circuit

DENVER - Halfway through the 1966 rodeo season Idaho's rangy Dean Oliver leads the big - hatted pros in prize money take, just as he has for the last three years.

Naming the current top ten winners in the game's various event categories Tuesday, the Rodeo Cowboys Association here said Oliver, 36, from Boise, has won $15,978 so far bidding for a fourth term as the annual all-around cowboy champion.

But, some 400 R.C.A.-sanctioned rodeos are ahead in the latter half of 1966 before Oliver will be sure of his crown.

Trailing Oliver in the sweepstakes title race is another roper-wrestler, Bob Ragsdale, 29, Chowchilla, Calif., with $13,451. Third place is owned by Paul Mayo, 24, Grinnell, with $12,309, collected in riding events.

Ragsdale, who joined pro ranks from Montana high school rodeo competition, is enjoying the best season of his career. Most of his money comes from calf roping where he trails Ron Sewalt, 24, Chico, Tex., by just $109 for the event's title lead. Sewalt has snared $10,189.

Other event leaders are Mayo, with $9,280, bareback bronc riding; Bill Smith, 25, Cody, Wyo., with $8,597 saddle bronc riding; Bob Wegner, 31, Auburn, Wash., with $7,647, bull riding; and Jack Roddy, 29, San Jose, Calif., with $8,121, steer wrestling.

Lion's share of the payoff went to Jim Bob Altizer, 33, Del Rio, Tex., the calf roping victor.

Braves Believe In Southern Hospitality

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Sure Atlanta belives in Southern hospitality.

But giving up four runs on a single. . . .!

That's what happened to Bobby Bragan's charitable Braves Thursday night when San Francisco handed Atlanta its sixth straight setback, 5-0.

Outfielder Felipe Alou was the goat on Cap Peterson's sixth inning single that broke open a 1-0 game. The bases were loaded on two infield hits and an intentional walk to Willie Mays when Peterson came to bat.

He laced a single to left and when the ball bounced past Alou and rolled to the fence, all four runners scored.

That gave Bob Bolin a comfortable margin and the Giants' right-hander made it stand up. He allowed only one single over the final seven innings and finished with a three-hitter for for his fourth victory in seven decisions.

The victory was the fifth straight for the National League-leading Giants, who still hold a 2 1/2-game margin over surging Los Angeles. The Dodgers won their ninth game in the last 10 by shutting out St. Louis for the second straight night, 2-0.

Houston tagged reliever Jack Baldschun for nine hits and scored eight runs in the 12th inning to beat Cincinnati 11-4. Philadelphia edged Chicago 5-4 and Pittsburgh blanked New York 5-0.

In the American League, Washington battered Boston 12-2, New York downed Chicago 5-3, Detroit nipped Minnesota 7-6, and Baltimore defeated California 9-6 in 10 innings.

Houston broke loose with eight straight singles before Baldschun broke the string by hitting a batter. When the Astros were through, they had eight runs and the Reds were headed for their sixth straight loss.

Jim Gentile, Dave Nicholson and Jim Wynn drove in two runs apiece in the big inning. Nicholson had belted a two-run homer earlier but Cincinnati rallied for two runs, tying the score in the ninth.

Rich Allen's hot bat continued to pace the Phillies. Allen smashed a 430-foot inside-the-park homer as Philadelphia won its fourth straight and seventh in the last nine.

Rookie catcher Randy Hundley hammered a two-run shot for the Cubs.

Vern Law pitched a three-hitter and cracked a home run as the Pirates blanked the Mets. It was Law's fourth straight shut-out over two seasons against New York and his first victory since opening day.

Donn Clendenon and Willie Stargell also homered for Pittsburgh.

FISHING FACTS

SAVE 'EM WITH SALT

A pinch of salt may not catch fish, but it certainly will preserve them.

According to the fishing experts at Mercury outboards, salt can be a substitute for ice to either keep fish fresh or preserve them over a long period without refrigeration.

When ice is not available, clean and bleed fish right after they have been caught. Rub them with a mixture of a tablespoon of pepper per cup of table salt. Keep the fish cool in a box or basket of leaves around which is wrapped moist burlap or newspaper.

When the fish arrive in the kitchen, the salt mixture is rinsed off and they are prepared for the table in the same manner as if they came directly from the water.

To preserve fish for a future use, the process is more complicated. After cleaning, wash them is a salt brine, then roll them in salt. Next, cover the bottom of a tub with salt and put in the fish.

As each row of fish is placed in the tub, add another layer of salt, allowing about one pound per four pounds of fish. Cover the container and weight it down so that fish stay below the level of brine as it forms. Fish should be cured from two to seven days, depending on individual size.

Remove fish, scrub in clear water and place them of wire racks under shade until dry. Then, restack with fresh salt and weight down.

A lot of trouble? Perhaps. But these fish will make a tasty dinner a long time after the season ends--and without a deep freeze.

There has been a steady decline in the number of executions in the United States in the last 35 years, despite a tremendous population explosion. The annual average has dropped in the northeastern United States from 31 to 7, from 21 to 3 in the north central states, in the southern states from 84 to 36 and from 19 to 11 in the western states. In Europe, in countries outside the Iron Curtain, capital punishment is rapidly being abolished.

All streams are slightly above normal and are in a clearing condition with good catches of goggle-eye and bass being reported throughout the Ozark region. Largemouth Kentucky and smallmouth bass are just beginning to move off spawning beds and most impoundments report increased activity, particularly using plastic worms and jigs and eels in the early morning and late evening. Authentic Vietnamese Village in Kansas

By BOB HONEYMAN
The Junction City Union
For The Associated Press

FT. RILEY, Kan. (AP)—An authentic Vietnamese village, nestled in a wooded area of this sprawling military reservation, is being used to teach jungle warfare to soldiers of the 9th Infantry Division undergoing basic training at Ft. Riley.

Located near the Republican River, the village contains 18 thatched huts, a market square, booby traps and other pitfalls, three haystacks for concealing men or equipment, three sniper or observation positions hidden in trees, a sampan dock and boat house.

The entire complex is connected by a maze of underground tunnels, constructed by burying 55-gallon drums without tops or bottoms. An entrance is provided to the village by a 100-yard tunnel on the river.

Capt. Floyd McAfee, Ft. Riley range officer who spent 18 months in Viet Nam, is in charge of the project. Use of the village began this week.

Basic trainees will receive hours of instruction in the village during their eighth week of training and additional instruction during advanced individual training.

Some 900 trainees took a look Wednesday and saw how a village could appear empty yet be full of hiding Viet Cong.

"Never walk past a haystack without putting your bayonet through it," warned Sgt. Manuel Jordan. "Because about the time you have your back to it, out pop six Viet Cong and then you have trouble, real trouble."

The trainees saw bear traps the Viet Cong began using after U. S. troops switched from the leather boots to jungle boots with protective metal in the soles, but only canvass covering the ankle.

They saw the step whip, a stick full of spikes laid on a trail so the pressure of a man's foot on one end would cause it to flip into hs face and body.

Capt. McAfee ripped out a false wall in one of the huts, exposing four hiding "Viet Cong."

The key to survival here is to be alert," McAfee said. "Suspect everything. The Viet Cong can apply a booby trap for any situation."

McAfee said actual Vietnamese villages are grouped along a river which is the only water supply for the inhabitants. "They don't know piped-in water as we know it," he said. "It's all carried from the river by hand."

The thatched huts include one large dwelling for the village chief. Viet Cong weapons, maps and other items of interest will be displayed in the market square. There also is a combination school house and cafe, apartment houses and other facilities. Troops dressed as Vietnamese will add authenticity to the training.

The Ft. Riley trainees have to stoop when they enter the dwellings, which are designed for people who average less than 5-foot-2 in height.

McAfee said a similar village using U.S. standards would contain about 100 inhabitants. In Viet Nam it would contain 500 to 1,000 persons.

"Many Vietnamese would like to have these houses," McAfee said.

Basic trainees will receive five hours of jungle training consisting of an hour orientation on Viet Nam, two hours of classroom instruction in such jungle problems as heat, insect and animal bites, heavy foliage, sanitation, psychological aspects of jungle operations and tactical considerations in raids, ambushes, security, search techniques and techniques of the enemy.

The remaining two hours will be a demonstration and practical exercise in objects of village seizure and search, interrogation procedures, certain psychological warfare aspects of population control, and detection and avoidance of booby traps and mines.

The village also will be used in advanced individual training, basic and advanced unit training and operational readiness training.

It will accommodate a battalion (900 men) size unit for training and can be utilized as a brigade (3600 men) headquarters for larger exercises.

Chinese Mayor Ousted

TOKYO AP -- Peng Chen, mayor of Peking and one of the Chinese Communist party's top members, was apparently stripped of his party post today as part of the current widespread purge of dissident elements.

Without mentioning the mayor's name, Peking radio in a Chinese-language broadcast announced the appointment of Li Hsueh - feng as first secretary of the party's Peking central committee. This was the post Peng Chen held before some of his close associates were accused of "antiparty, anti-socialist" activities.

Peng Chen has not been reported seen in public for more than two months, and there had been rumors that he was marked for the purge.

The purge apparently has entered a new phase, with the party leadership intensifying its crackdown and admitting the opposition is "still very powerful." Editorials in the official Peking People's Daily and other published statements this week show that the cleanup is not having smooth sailing.

Peng Chen, now 67, reportedly ranked ninth among Red China's leaders and once was regarded as a possible successor to Mao Tze-tung. He has not been openly accused, but there have been hints that he was involved with three men charged with wanting "to overthrow the leadership of the Chinese Communist party."

These three, whom Peking repeatedly has accused of being traitors, are Wu Han, the vice mayor of Peking; Liao Mo-sha, a member of the Peking party central committee, and Teng To, former editor of the Peking People's Daily

The campaign against dissidents started last November as a crackdown on intellectuals. It has broadened, with Peking's official publications calling it a life and death struggle. They also note that the Hungarian uprising almost 10 years ago started with an intellectual revolt.

The People's Daily acknowledged Wednesday that the campaign was of purge proportions, saying it had swept away "a horde of monsters' entrenched in ideological and cultural positions.

Another People's Daily editorial Thursday struck a note of concern and urgency and admitted that "bourgeois ideology is still very powerful and exerts an immense influence in our country."

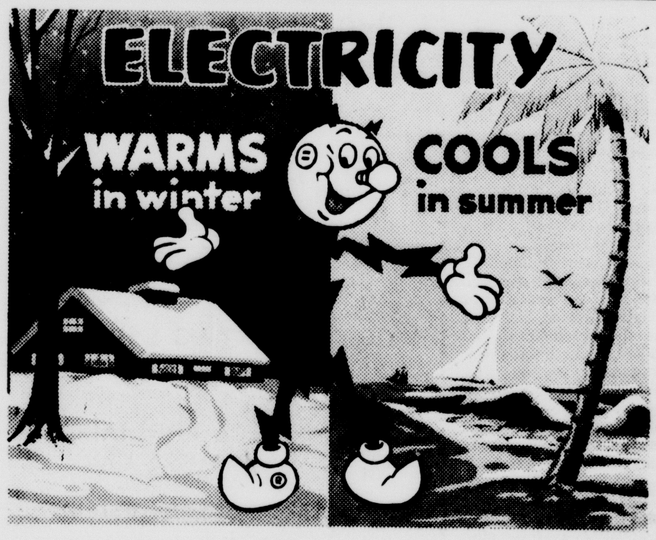

It urged Chinese Communists to "rally under the great banner of Mao Tze-tung's thought and wage resolute and relentless struggles against the antiparty and antisocialist bourgeois representatives."

The editorial said that victory in the struggle could not be taken for granted.

ARTICLE #13

The rain continues to fall. It bangs against the tents and drips into puddles on the ground. It blows in sheets across the airfield, and drums into the trees. The steady rhythmn of the rain is punctuated now and then with great jagged streaks of lightening and sharp reports of thunder, snapping shrilly at first, then rolling through the valleys, picking up the resonance of the hollows, and cascading like a pounding surf out of the hills, with a deep throated roar.

An oxcart creaks slowly down a road, it's driver sitting cross-legged on the high-board, oblivious to the rain. The aircraft sulk dejectedly on the ground, held down by the rain, their graceful forms mirrored by the water around them. Charlie is taking advantage of the monsoon season, and is operating through the surrounding woods more freely, than when the ships are flying. This is being counteracted somewhat, by increased use of tracks and armor. A couple of ARVN tracks are positioned just across the road from our area, and they are firing twin fifty calibres into the wood line. The guns roar and buck, and the tracer rounds glow brilliantly, as they flash through the rain. The spent casings pour out of the breaches on each side of the track. The Viet - Namese children scramble to pick them up, not as souvenirs, but for the cash value they can realize from them.

There are many children in Viet Nam. They will forever be my most vivid memory of this country. When it rains, they take their clothes off, and stand naked, uninhibited, and unembarrassed boy or girl. Sometimes they huddle together in groups of two or three under a piece or canvas, or beneath a sheet of tin, seeking some shelter. They don't have the shocked look of terror that make prize winning war photographs, because they have never known anything else with which to compare their current state. They have no childhood. They don't play like American children. This can be understood when you realize that American children play when they are subteen, at imitating adults. They play doctor, play teacher, truck driver, cowboy, then when they are in their teens, they enjoy sports. Here, it is a constant battle for survival from the time the child is old enough to walk and talk, until they are teen-agers, when they go to war. (It doesn't really seem to matter which side they fight on, it seems more a happening of chance, rather than conviction, as to whether they are VC, Loyalist, or one of the many other splinter groups.) The children here never laugh, but then you seldom hear them cry either. Somehow, they seem merely to survive.

A Game Called "Comrade"

By ROBERT TUCKMAN
ABOARD CARRIER ENTERPRISE, Off North Viet Nam (AP) — The Russians and the U. S. 7th Fleet are following each other around in the seas off Viet Nam.

The game is called "Comrade" by the Americans. It's played this way:

A Soviet fishing trawler, equipped with an unusual amount of radar, shows up a few miles from the 90,000-ton, nuclear-powered Enterprise.

Its mission, apart from fishing, is snooping.

It wants to find out how many planes are aboard the carrier, how many are launched each day for attacks against North Viet Nam and any other information.

When the trawler shows up, the word goes round the Enterprise: "Comrade is shadowing us again."

A few miles behind, however, the fast nuclear-powered missile frigate Bainbridge is shadowing the Soviet shadower.

This keeps up for a few hours until Comrade drops out of sight, only to reappear a day or two later.

No guns are fired. No one makes any hostile moves. The ships don't even signal each other.

"They seem to want to be friendly," says Capt. James L. Holloway, skipper of the Enterprise.

"We haven't made any contact with them. They have every right to be here on the high seas.

"But I can't imagine what kind of information they're getting. We've got some of our planes below the flight deck which they can't see. The others we keep in motion day and night so they can't have much of an idea of what's going on.

"They don't bother us and we don't bother them."

32 In A Series To Acquaint You With The Churches In This Area.

THIS WEEK SALUTING

CHRIST GOSPEL CHURCH

Christ Gospel Church of Sikeston, Mo., was founded on Labor Day of 1961. The church was purchased from the church of God of Prophesy.

Bro. and Sis. Conner came in to Sikeston in 1961 and held a revival, from that revival a group of people got a vision of running on with Jesus and growing up in His stature.

People came from far and wide to receive deliverance from God. They go away rejoicing.

"We feel that pentecost is not a denomination or an organization, but an experience from God for everyone that has a 'born again' experience."

The church believes in the blood of Jesus, in the baptism of the Holy Ghost, in water baptism, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ and in healing. They are taught how to go on for Jesus.

We have approximately 150 on roll in Sunday School, and 10 teachers. The church has a missionary vision.

Since the church has been established we have had jail services at the Benton jail on Sunday afternoon. There have been many saved through the preaching at the jail services. Mr. Chester Swinney is in charge of the jail services. We have old folks home every Sunday afternoon.

There have been approximately 2,000 that have received the baptism of the Holy Ghost since the birth of the church, and there have been around 1,000 that have been baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

EVANGELIST AND MRS. LEONARD CONNOR

"We believe that without a vision people perish."

Bro. and Sis. Conner pastored the church the first 10 months, then Bro. and Sis. Beatty from Louisville, Ky., pastored for a year. Bro. and Sis. All Borsen from Wisconsin came in for a season, then Bro. and Sis. Winters came in to pastor from Louisville, Ky. In September Bro. and Sis. Connor returned. While Bro. Conner is on the Evangelistic field, Sis. Conner pastors the church. Many of the congregation are from out of town.

Two years ago the church purchased a nine room house beside the church which is the parsonage. Since September we have remodeled the church completely on the inside including the Sunday School rooms and some remodeling on the parsonage.

The Christ Gospel Church central office is in Jeffersonville, Ind. The Christ Gospel Churches are very missionary minded. They sent $122,000 to our missionaries in foreign countries last year. We have a large home for orphans outside Mexico City. In Mexico City and surrounding areas we have 32 churches. We have a roof top school in Hong Kong with 350 children, and a church there also. We have several churches in Africa and other countries, in addition to the churches in the United States, which are too numerous to number.

We invite everyone to attend. It doesn't matter about the color or creed. "Jesus came to save the lost and set the example for Christians to love everyone."

Contractor's Viewpoint On Government Construction Contract Specifications

New ASPR revisions, if contractors are not vigilant, could change the scope and meaning of their contracts, raise costs of doing business with federal government.

EDITOR'S NOTE - The April 27 issue of Construction News carried two interviews of considerable importance to all contractors and members of the construction industry involved primarily with federal (as well as some other) construction work. The following article broadens the base on which these two interviews were conducted -- namely the Armed Services Procurement Regulations, more commonly known as the ASPR.

In these two interviews, Don Giampaoli of the AGC's Washington staff and E. Manning Seltzer, General Counsel to the Chief of Engineers, U.S. Army, presented the contractor's views and the government's views, respectively, on a revised concept of equitable adjustments in contract administration. This revised concept may, in the near future, be incorporated in the ASPR. As proposed, it should be received favorably by the industry as a whole, but there are other current and proposed revisions of the ASPR which will not receive such favorable acceptance by the private segment of the industry.

Construction News asked Clarence Crumpecker, in his position as Chairman of the Specifications Task Unit of the AGC , to prepare an article concerning the ramifications of these other proposed changes in the ASPR. His article appears here.

Both Don Giampaoli and Manning Seltzer have had much wider experience in the field of contract specifications than I and both are experts in this field. Their discussions are very helpful and should be studied with care by any contractor performing work for the federal government.

It is my view, however, that the most serious development in the field of construction contracts in modern times grows out of the new Armed Services Procurement Regulations (ASPR).

These new regulations could, if we are not vigilant, change the scope, meaning and cost of our contracts; they could affect our relationships with our subcontractors; and they could change our methods of transacting business with our equipment dealers and our vendors of materials and supplies.

Most of us remember how two recent rulings by the Labor Department affected us. One of these changed our method of transacting business on rental-maintenance contracts with equipment dealers. The other, on revetment jobs, almost made subcontractors out of rock suppliers since they were made subject to all provisions of our contracts with the federal government by having the Davis-Bacon wage rates and regulations imposed on them. The first ruling is with us, but due largely to the personal efforts of Bruce Tucker* and the national AGC the second was rescinded.

About three years ago Defense Secretary McNamara appointed a committee to review, rewrite and combine into one volume all Armed Services Procurement Regulations -- both civil and military -- pertaining to procurement, supply and construction contracts. When completed, the volume will be a massive document containing some 1,500 to 2,000 pages of all the regulations for the acquisition of everything -- from socks and neckties to bombers and missiles and for the administration of the smallest construction contract to the billion-dollar construction contract in Viet Nam.

When my committee of the National AGC first learned of the background of the members of the ASPR Committee, we were dismayed. Most of them had considerable experience in supply and procurement contracts, but not one had any previous experience with either the preparation or administration of construction contracts.

TWO REQUESTS MADE

The AGC obtained an audience with the ASPR Committee and made two requests: (1), that all regulations concerning construction contracts, including general provisions, special provisions, and technical provisions be put in a separate section of the new ASPR; and (2), that the AGC be allowed to review all construction contract regulations, suggesting changes, deletions and/or additions before they were placed in their final form in the ASPR.

The reasoning behind the first request was that if all construction contract regulations were in a separate section there would be less likelihood that these regulations, which had heretofore applied only to supply and procurement contracts, would find their way into all construction contracts. This request was partially refused and the general provisions for all types of contracts remain in a single section.

A separate section, however, is to be devoted to the special and technical provisions of construction contracts.

In June of 1964 I was a member of a small committee of contractors who, along with Mr. Giampaoli of the national AGC, reviewed the new ASPR Construction Contract Regulations. We found that some of the new regulations followed the exact wording of the ones they were to replace and that in others the new wording did not change the meaning or the intent of the regulations. These were passed over without comment.

In other regulations, we requested the substitution of a single word as, for example, in the Payment Provision, which states in effect that when a construction contract is 50% complete and progress is satisfactory the contracting officer MAY make subsequent partial payment estimates without deducting retainage. We requested the word SHALL be substituted for MAY, our reasoning being that when a contract was 50% complete and the progress was satisfactory, the contracting officer should not have the authority to continue to withhold retainage for any other reason. But we lost this one.

INSPECTION PROVISION

Our earlier fears that regulations which had never been a part of construction contract documents would find their way into them unless all construction contract regulations were placed in a separate section of the ASPR were realized. The ASPR's Contractor's Inspection Provision, which has been a part of supply and procurement contracts but never a part of construction contracts, is now incorporated in our standard construction contracts. This provision states:

The Contractor shall (1) maintain an adequate inspection system and perform such inspections as will assure that the work performed under the contract conforms to contract requirements, and (2) maintain and make available to the Government adequate records of such inspections. ASPR 7-602.10 (a)

From its inception, this provision, which is now a part of all contracts, has caused the AGC more concern than any other provision in present government construction contracts. No one knows just what it means and there has been no clarification by the Office of the Chief of Engineers as to what the administration of it should be despite repeated requests by the AGC.

In some areas of work the Corps of Engineers has required only that the job superintendent keep a daily log of what work was performed each day and show that he had inspected the work. (The superintendent is supposed to keep the log either on his person or in his vehicle at all times so that the contracting officer or his representative may have access to it at any time.)

On the other hand, we have documentary evidence that a contracting officer wrote a contractor demanding that he (the contractor) hire a full time Superintendent of Inspection and supply him (the superintendent) with all the necessary technicians and equipment to adequately inspect the work. Voluminous daily reports were to be kept and copies submitted weekly to the contracting officer. Even though the job was well underway before this demand was made, the contracting officer further demanded that the daily log reports be made retroactive and prepared from the beginning of the job.

OMISSIONS PROVISION

There is yet another new provision in Corps of Engineers' contracts which come from the ASPR via the Navy's Bureau of Yards and Docks, which states:

Omissions from the drawings or specifications or the misdescription of details of work which are manifestly necessary to carry out the intent of the drawings and specifications, or which are customarily performed, shall not relieve the contractor from performing such omitted or misdescribed details of work, but they shall be performed as if fully and correctly set forth and described in the drawings and specifications.

This is one of the most unfair provisions that has ever been placed in a Corps of Engineers contract or any other contract for that matter. The Navy claims that it has used this provision since 1952, and that, is its administration of the regulation, the provision has applied only to MINOR omissions or deletions in contract documents. But is not what the regulation spells out; and it could be used for MAJOR omission and deletions in a job's plans and specifications.

This regulation places on the contractor the burden of finding errors and omissions on the plans and in the specifications before the job is awarded and places the contractor in the position of having to read the minds of the architects, engineer and designer in order to protect himself. Few contractors are so clairvoyant.

The Navy's claim that it uses this regulation only in minor matters will not bear close scrutiny because the Board of Contract Appeals has ruled against it on two occasions very recently in its interpretation of the regulation.

SUMMING UP

The national AGC has requested the ASPR Committee to remove both of the regulations mentioned above from the ASPR because it believes these two regulations add nothing of value to the finished product and that they are costly to administer.

The contractor's Inspection Regulation causes duplicity of inspection since the Armed Services have always inspected the work performed; the Omissions Regulation makes the contractor responsible for poorly drawn plans and specification which he has had no part in preparing.

I would like to caution all contractors performing work for the federal government to carefully read all specifications on each job BEFORE EACH LETTING. If you find any new regulations in these contract documents that have no value or particular application to the job, you should report them to your AGC chapter manager. Should he be unsuccessful in having these regulations withdrawn, he will then report to the national AGC for its presentation to the office of the Chief of Engineers.

If contractors performing work for the federal government remain vigilant and are prompt in reporting the appearance of new regulations in the contract documents we can keep the construction contract we now have in its presently relatively clear, concise and fair form. However, if we are not alert, the construction contract will change radically within the next few years as new ASPR regulations find their way into our contract documents.

Clarence W. Crumpecker is president of Wm. Crumpecker & Sons Co. of Morehouse, Mo., which is engaged primarily in flood control work performed for the U.S. Corps of Engineers. He is a national director of the Associated Contractors of America and, for the last three years, has been chairman of the Specifications Task Unit meeting with the Chief of Engineers, U.S. Army, in Washington. He is also chairman of the Specifications Committee of the AGC's Mississippi Valley Flood Control Branch at Memphis, Tenn.

TEN PERSONS are busily engaged preparing the seedbed for a community garden, on a large plot, provided by Mr. and Mrs. A. David Ragan, directors of the Delmo Housing Corporation at South Lilbourn. Shown are men and women preparing the large plot for planting.

A COMMUNITY PARK is being readied for summer activities for the old and young at the South Lilbourn housing project. The park will have playground equipment added, a shelter house provided for two large tables and a barbeque pit for outdoor picnic facilities.

Housing Corp Works Together

LILBOURN -- The Lilbourn Housing Corporation, located at South Lilbourn, will soon receive the fruits of their labor, after the completion of a community park and garden project.

The park site has been cleared, and the nearly 10 acre site has been planted with trees, shrubbery and flowers at the edges of the ground.

A shelter house is now under construction, and will house several picnic tables and a larger barbeque grill, and a concrete floor. The park will be made available to the children and grown-ups of the South Lilbourn project. Playground equipment has been ordered and will be placed on the grounds in the next few weeks.

The second project, adjoining the park site, is a large community garden. The garden plot, measuring more than an acre is now being planted in peas, tomatoes, green beans and cucumbers.

When the vegetables are harvested in late summer and fall, they will be made available to supplement the food supply of the older needy families living in the community, for their winter needs.

The program was made available to the community through the economic opportunity act, with funds for the completion of the two projects, as well as additional funds for labor done, both in the community and garden projects.

Moves to Annex Land

DEXTER -- The City of Dexter has filed a declaratory judgment suit against several persons who own property north and west of Dexter that is included in the present city limits extension plan.

Named in the suit are George Sisler, Chester Fralick, Lewis Rogers, Jr., Woodrow E. Gaines and Lee Rainey.

Paul McGhee, city attorney, said that in order for a city to annex property, it is necessary that a declaratory judgment suit be filed in the Circuit Court.

Should any persons be opposed to such action, he pointed out, they would have 30 days in which to file an answer.

The annexation plan will be studied by the Circuit Court Judge who will rule whether or not the plan is reasonable and if the judge rules in favor of the annexation it will then be put to the city voters for approval.

The case was filed by the city in the Circuit Court on May 16.

More Hope for Cure of Cancer

By ROBERT GOLDENSTEIN
AP Science Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Two findings that open a new approach toward the elusive goal of finding the cause and prevention of cancer were disclosed today by a medical research team from Columbia University.

The researchers presented the strongest tentative evidence yet that cancers may be started by viruses which then move on to repeat their destructive work in adjoining cells.

Dr. John K. Lattimer, co-chairman of the department of urology at Columbia University in New York, said that virus-like particles have been found for the first time in healthy looking cells lying adjacent to cancer cells in prostate glands. They were not found in the cancer cells.

He said his researchers also discovered that these cells, which appeared normal under ordinary-light microscopes, actually were growing at the "same tremendous rate" as cancer cells.

"The discovery of either condition was unusual, but when they appear in combination it becomes exciting," he said in an interview at the annual meeting of the American Urological Association.

Dr. Myron Tannenbaum, pathologist member of the research team which made the twin discoveries, described the findings and exhibited picture slides at the urologists' convention.

Lattimer, who heads the research project, said "the next step which we're working on now" is to attempt to isolate the virus-like particles. Under the electron microscope the particles are identical in appearance to the Lucke tumor virus which causes cancers in frog kidneys.

Draft Call for August

WASHINGTON AP -- The Defense Department announced today it has placed a draft call for 32,600 men in august.

This figure is considerably above the levels asked for the other summer months. The Pentagon asked the Selective Service to provide 15,000 men in June -- lowest of the year -- and 26,500 in July.

All inductees called in August will be assigned to the Army. The Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force sought no men.

Morehouse Rural Telephone Customers to Get Direct Distance Dialing, Sunday, June 5

Direct Distance Dialing is the fastest, most convenient way to place station-to-station Long Distance calls. It's easy, too. Here's how Morehouse rural customers will dial Long Distance station-to-station calls beginning Sunday, June 5.

JUST DIAL THE DIGIT "1" FOLLOWED BY THE AREA CODE AND TELEPHONE NUMBER

For Example: To Call Chicago, KLondike 7-2098

Dial	"1" (DDD Code)	312 (Area Code)	KL (Two Letters)	7-2098 (Five Figures)

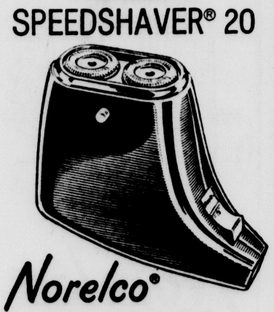

The operator will come on the line and ask what telephone number you are calling from. Tell her and, in seconds, you're talking Long Distance.

If you reach a wrong number, find out the telephone number and city you reached. Hang up and dial "operator" immediately. She will see that you are not charged for the call.

Sowers Brothers, With Excellent Records, To Join Family Newspaper

RECEIVING KAPPA Tau Alpha honorary journalism society award at the University of Missouri School of Journalism, Stephen D. Sowers, right, receives certificate from Prof. Howard Taft, as his younger brother, Tom, left, recipient of the Omicron Delta Kappa National Society award, is congratulated by Robert Jackson, Corpus Christi, Texas, journalism medal winner. Jackson is a 1928 J-School classmate of the Sowers brothers' father, Edward W. Sowers. NEWS & GUIDE Photo

COLUMBIA, Mo. -- The Edward W. Sowers newspaper family of Rolla is scheduled to be well represented in the June 7 Commencement on the Columbia campus of the University of Missouri. Two sons of Edward (Eddie) W. Sowers, Rolla publisher and president of the Sowers Newspapers, Inc., and Mrs. Sowers, and the wife of one of the sons are candidates for degrees.

An added unusual aspect is that both sons are studying for their degrees in the School of Journalism, from which the father received his Bachelor of Journalism degree in 1928.

Stephen E. Sowers, the eldest son, who received an A. B. here in 1964, is a graduate student in the School and candidate for his Master of Arts degree with news writing and publishing his area of concentration. Thomas S. Sowers is a candidate for his Bachelor of Journalism degree in the field of advertising. Stephen's wife, in the College of Arts and Science, is a candidate for a Bachelor of Arts degree with a major in fine arts. She is the former Miss Sheryl Ann McCubbins of Cabool, Mo.

The sons are following in their father's footsteps even further than getting degrees at the University of Missouri and getting them in journalism; they are going into the publishing business with him. On graduation Stephen and Thomas will join their father and mother in making an active family foursome in the Sowers Newspapers, Inc., which publishes the Rolla Daily News and the Fort Gateway Guide at Waynesville.

Presently Mr. Sowers is president and Mrs. Sowers is secretary-treasurer of the Sowers Newspapers, Inc., and Mr. Sowers is publisher of the papers. After graduation Stephen is to be an associate publisher and managing editor of the newspapers, and Thomas is to be an associate publisher and advertising manager. Recently the Sowers publishing activities were incorporated to include their three sons, Stephen, Thomas and James, in the business as vice-president.

The youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Sowers, James, is planning to enter engineering, and is a sophomore at the University of Missouri at Rolla, but is a member of the corporation.

Stephen and Thomas will start their newspaper careers with a background of training even more extensive than graduation from the School of Journalism with its experience on a daily newspaper of general circulation, the Columbia Missourian. As their father puts it, "both Steve and Tom took thorough pre-college courses in the 'Rolla Daily News School of Journalsim.'"

The two journalism-minded sons have made a promising record in the University. Both are members of Kappa Tau Alpha, national honorary fraternity honoring scholarship in journalism, into which Stephen was initiated during recent Journalism Week, and of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalism fraternity. In addition, Thomas was recently initiated into Omicron Delta Kappa, national leadership honor society for men.

At the spring meeting of the Inland Press Association in Chicago Stephen presented a paper from his master's thesis, which is a cost study of five Missouri dailies comparing offset and tabular operations before some 500 publishers. Later he presented the same paper before the Ozark Press Association meeting in Springfield, Mo.

Edward W. Sowers, who is a past president (1962-63) of the University of Missouri Alumni Association, in commenting on his sons both going into newspaper work and staying in Missouri, said he "notes not only with personal pride but state pride that a goodly number of journalism graduates are staying in Missouri, where I think they will improve the quality of the newspapers."

He was thinking of the publishing families such as the Blantons of Sikeston, Stapletons of Kennett, Dales of Carthage, Meusers of Monett, Sparks of Hannibal, Whites of Mexico Briggs of Macon, Bradleys of St. Joseph, Scrutons of Sedalia, Bush of Neosho, Swains of Kirksville, Van Cleves of Moberly, Hains of Marshall, Watkins of Chillicothe, Johnsons of Fulton, Wolpers of Poplar Bluff, Naeters of Cape Girardeau, among the dailies, and many good weeklies like the Davis' of Houston, Roop of Desoto, Millers of Washington, the Vickerys of Salem; Kirkpatricks of Windsor; Simpsons of Holden and Odessa; Fergusons of Fredericktown; to name a few.

Mr. Sowers, upon graduation from the School of Journalism, started his newspaper career on the Boonville, Mo., Advertiser, of which the late Walter Williams, first Dean of the School of Journalism and later President of the University, had at one time been publisher. He also edited the Boonville Daily News and the Excelsior Springs, Mo., Daily Standard before he bought the Rolla New Era in 1942.

Youngsters Steal Show

By ROBERT HOLTON

NEW YORK AP -- Four youngsters, their hands so dirty they wouldn't shake hands with a prince, stole the show Wednesday night from a gem-adorned group of society's most famous women.

Cheryl, Debby and Joseph Caponetta and Kevin Meade turned the trick as some 650 socialities, diplomats, business leaders and a royal prince trooped aboard a Holland-America luxury liner in the name of charity.

They didn't go aboard the liner but mingled with the crowd at the pier as the vessel was about to sail.

"My hands were pretty dirty," said Kevin, 6. "And I just didn't want to have him see them so I held them behind my back when we met him."

The him Kevin referred to was Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands, royal host of the fifth annual "Captain's Gala" sponsored by the New York City chapter of the American Cancer Society as a fund-raising program.

"Why don't you come aboard with us and have dinner?" the prince asked the four youngsters, ranging in age from six to 10.

"Oh no," an official said. "We don't even know who they are. We might get them in trouble by taking them away."

The liner carried the guests, who paid $150 each, to a point a few miles outside the harbor where it circled for four hours as its passengers ate a seven-course dinner and then gambled in a casino set up in one of the ship's main lounges.

Chapter officials estimated the night's entertainment reaped some $150,000 for use in research and other work on cancer.

The children had been brought to the pier by the father of three of them -- Frank Caponetta, a sporting goods store operator who had delivered some items to be used for prizes at the gambling table.

I was sitting alone in the Officer'sClub at Fort Ord while my escort made an important telephone call. On the stool next to mine sat a young major. After staring at my low-cut evening gown for several embarrassing minutes, he finally spoke.

"Would you be interested," he asked in an assured voice, "in contributing to the delinquency of a major?"

THE PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

FRIDAY, JUNE 3, 1966
Then He (Jesus) said to them: "Go forth to every part of the world, and proclaim the Good News to the whole creation." (Mark 16:15 NEB)

PRAYER: May the Holy Spirit, O God, direct us in all our ways, and lead us into all truth. Thus fulfill in us also Christ's promise to His first disciples. In His name we pray. Amen.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mr. Charles Blanton, Jr.
Sikeston, Missouri
Dear Mr. Blanton,

The Sikeston Art League's exhibit owes a great deal of its success to the fine publicity the Standard was able to give us. We were, with your help, able to reach first the artist, to inform him of the coming show and then to let the public know when and where. The artist responded and we had more entries than in other years. The viewers turned out in force and in spite of conflicting events and the holiday weekend, we saw record crowds at the exhibit.

Thank you for adding so greatly to the success of the exhibit and for making my job of publicity easy.

Sincerely,
Barbara Smith

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I think it's mighty noble of you to want to buck up the women over 40 when they write and say they are pregnant (and ready to kill themselves) but have you ever stopped to think about how life looks to children who are born to women past 40? I know because I am one.

My father died before I graduated from high school -- of old age, of course. I never knew a grandparent. My nieces and nephews are just about my age. (My nephew went to school with me and it was pretty embarrassing to have that little runt call me auntie).

Please quit telling those old crows how great the "late dividend" can be. -- ONE MYSELF.

Dear One: Those women don't ask whether or not they should have late babies. They are ALREADY pregnant! I try to make them feel good about it.

As for you -- wouldn't you rather have been born late than never?

Dear Ann Landers: I was adopted by a wonderful family when I was an infant. Mom and dad are the only parents I have ever known. They did not tell me I was adopted because I was a delicate child and they didn't want to add to my problem. A neighbor woman blurted it out one day and it had a terrible effect on me. Why, oh why, can't people keep their mouths shut?

Now I am going through the same thing again. We have three children and two are adopted. We have never told our adopted children about their history because we didn't want them to feel different from our blood child. Everything was going along fine until last week when we visited relatives in another state. My sister-in-law's children spilled the beans.

Now our adopted children are bitter and resentful. They say we tried to fool them and they are sullen and withdrawn.

Please, Ann Landers, tell people that it's up to the parents to tell or NOT to tell their children if they are adopted. Outsiders should shut up about it. --SALT LAKE MOTHER

Dear Mother: If you had grown up with the knowledge that you were adopted -- as you should have -- the neighbor's remark would have had no effect on you whatever. If your children had been told at an early age that they were chosen because they were very special and you wanted them very much, they would not feel betrayed now.

People talk - and they especially talk about other people. To expect the whole world to keep your secret was a foolish miscalculation. I have said this repeatedly in my column and I'll say it again. Adopted children should be told by their parents as soon as they learn to talk. This information, when offered by an outsider, can produce wounds that never heal.

Dear Ann: I'm 28 and engaged to marry a fine girl. Problem: I was divorced two years ago. No children. No alimony. No dirt. I want to tell my fiancee's parents BEFORE we marry. She says no. She feels they will take it better after we are married. What do you say? --R.R.

Dear R.R.: Tell them at once. And don't leave out any details for others to provide -- as they inevitably will if you give them the opportunity.

Awkward and self-conscious? Unsure of yourself? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key To Popularity," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

ARCHITECT'S drawing shows the planned appearance of the $1.8 million multi-purpose auditorium which will be constructed on the campus of the University of Missouri at Rolla to serve as an auditorium seating 6,400 and to double as an indoor athletic and physical education headquarters.

ROLLA, Mo., -- The Board of Curators at the University of Missouri at Rolla has authorized a $2 million expansion program to provide a multiple-purpose auditorium seating 6,400 and an adjacent football stadium having 4,000 permanent seats and press booth facilities. Chancellor Merl Baker said that advertisements for bids are expected to be published soon, although completion of the facilities may be a year or more away.

Funds for the facilities were provided by the 73rd General Assembly a year ago.

The multi-purpose building will provide a structure with a gross area of 90,000 square feet suitable for indoor athletic events, concerts, commencements, and even drama activities on a proposed 24 by 52-foot portable stage. The building will contain a basketball court 148 by 120 feet in size, constructed so that two practice courts can be utilized.

Marshall and Brown, Kansas City architectural and engineering firm, has prepared final plans for the structure that includes an auditorium-gymnasium with folding bleachers seating 2,400, folding chairs increasing capacity by 1,000, and a balcony seating for 3,000.

It will contain 10 offices, wrestling, weight, gymnastic, trainer and therapy rooms, locker rooms, three handball courts, a 42 by 75-foot swimming pool with a balcony seating 270, as well as basketball courts.

The multi-purpose auditorium will be located along Tenth Street and Bishop Avenue (U.S. 63), with the football stadium separated by parking areas that can serve both the stadium and the auditorium.

The ground floor of the auditorium will contain the locker, training and equipment rooms, showers, offices and facilities for gymnastics, handball and wrestling. The natatorium and gymnasium-auditorium, with concession stands, will be located on the first floor. The second floor will offer balcony seating for the gymnasium-auditorium as well as activiey space.

Beneath the stadium is planned equipment and storage facilities as well as team locker rooms. Atop the structure will be a two-story press box 50 feet long.

Cost estimates for the multi-purpose auditorium are approximately $1,826,000.

Specifications call for the ground floor to have two classrooms of 880 square feet; wrestling and weight rooms of 1,280 square feet; a gymnastics room of 1,620 square feet with a 22-foot ceiling; three handball courts with 22-foot ceilings, as well as locker rooms for athletics and physical education. Women's lockers, with shower and drying room areas and access to the swimming pool and playing floor, will be included on the main floor.

The POWER of FAITH
By WOODI ISHMAEL

The Rev. Michio Imai, a United Church of Christ pastor, has conceived and established a unique ministry in his country, Japan. After witnessing the deep personal grief of a family who lost a member, a truck driver, in a fatal crash, he took positive steps towards prevention of highway accidents.

Fatigue, loneliness, strain and lack of sleep are enemies of long distance truckers.

In Japan, long distance truckers with small firms have driving assignments for as much as four days and nights without real rest. With the financial help of churches in Holland, Germany and Australia, through the World Council of Churches, he was able to establish a truckers mission. At Kakogawa on the highway that runs between Tokyo and Shimonoseki, he has built what is now known as The Traffic Labor Welfare Center. It consists of a restaurant for 50 people, hot baths, beds for 25 drivers, and an official counseling room.

Mrs. Imai runs the restaurant, helped by three children. Much of Mr. Imai's time is spent talking to and counseling the men. He has the help of two full time staff members and six part time counselors.

Today In U. S. History

Today is Friday, June 3, the 153rd day of 1966. There are 211 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1942, the Battle of Midway began when U.S. Navy patrol planes spotted a vast Japanese armada of 53 warships and 20 supply vessels in the Pacific some 700 miles west of Midway Island. A violent battle ensued in which four Japanese carriers, two heavy cruisers and two destroyers were sunk.

On this date in 1918, air mail service was inaugurated between New York, Boston and Montreal.

In 1940, German planes bombed Paris.

In 1940, the evacuation of Dunkerue was completed -- ending a never-to-be-forgotten chapter in military history.

In 1942, Japanese war planes, raided Dutch Harbor, Alaska.

In 1946, the president of the Soviet Union, Mikail Kalinin, died.

Ten years ago -- Soviet Communist party chief Nikita Khrushchev reportedly lashed out at Joseph Stalin during a speech in Prague, Czechoslovakia, declaring that Stalin almost caused a split with the Communist Chinese party.

Five years ago -- President John F. Kennedy began a two-day conference with Soviet Premier Khrushchev in Vienna. The President traveled to Vienna from Paris where he had met with French president De Gaulle.

One year ago -- The four-day, 62-orbit space flight of astronauts James McDivitt and Edward White aboard the Gemini 4 began. White was to make his historic 20-minute, walk in space.

Baccalaureate service will be held at 11 a.m. and commencement exercises will be held at 5 p.m. central daylight savings time at the west end of Jackling Field.

Dr. George E. Pake, provost and professor of physics at Washington University, St. Louis, will be the commencement speaker, and the Rev. Thomas F. McQueeny, S.J. dean of student affairs, Saint Louis University, will deliver the baccalaureate address.

James Joseph Ward, Chaffee, Bachelor of Science in chemistry.

Charles Davis Woodward, 408 Clayton Ave., Sikeston, Bachelor of Science in mechanical engineering.

Signs posted in public buildings could frequently have some odd consequences if taken literally.

There is, for instance, a sign in our Jacksonville Civic Auditorium which reads: "Rest rooms on second floor; please use the elevator."

Kennett Hospital Approved

KENNETT-- Dunklin County Memorial Hospital in Kennett has been officially approved by the U.S. Public Health Service for the Medicare program which begins in July.

Administrator James A. Fox reports that the official certification for participation in Medicare, dated May 27, was received by his office on Tuesday, May 31.

Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital at Hayti has not yet received the certification but has been informed that the hospital has been approved for the program, Administrator G. R. Freeman said this morning.

Approximately 150 hospitals in Missouri have applied for participation in the Medicare program. All of these were sent questionnaires early in May asking them to state what conditions existed regarding integration of staff, rooms, eating facilities, rest rooms, entrances and other facets of the hospital program.

There has been no indication that any hospital in the state would reject the civil rights requirements of Medicare, Dr. Carl C. Siegel, regional program director of the division of medical care administration of the Public Health Service, reports. But investigations are being made to determine by personal visits what conditions exist at the hospitals, he said.

series of rendezvous maneuvers.

Stafford made his first move in the chase just seconds after the Gemini went into orbit. He fired his jet thrusters to adjust the high point of the space ship's orbital path to about 172 miles.

As the rocket rose, capsule communicator Neil A. Armstrong, who commanded the Gemini 8 flight, told the astronauts they were "go for staging."

"Roger, understand we're go," Stafford replied.

When the second stage separated, Stafford saw the ignition of the thrusters on his spacecraft. "We have a beautiful fireball," he said. "It's fantastic."

When the 138-foot gantry was pulled away from the spacecraft this morning, and light broke into the capsule, Cernan murmured: "Oh, boy!" Stafford added, "It's a great day."

And it was. Proving that third time is charm, the Titan vaulted off its pad at 9:39 a.m. EDT, riding its blazing trail of hot gases to more than 100 miles out into space.

By the time the space ship settled into orbit, the target satellite had sped 428 miles ahead of them--and the chase was on. It was to terminate high over the western Pacific about 2:30 p.m.

This would be two hours less than the time the Gemini 8 astronauts took in March when they executed history's first space union with an Agena satellite.

During today's chase, command pilot Stafford was to maneuver Gemini 9 in much the same manner that Apollo astronauts will guide space ships leaving the moon for return journeys to earth.

All three days of the Gemini 9 flight plan were packed with important, action-filled tests. The plan was to be altered in flight, depending on whether or not the satellite remained locked in its shroud.

Still patiently optimistic despite past disappointments, Stafford, an Air Force lieutenant colonel, and Cernan, a Navy lieutenant commander, were reported "intent and ready" as they rode back today to Pad 19.

Twice before, the astronauts had sweated out the countdown, then dejectedly rode the slow elevator back to the ground when the mission was scrubbed.

As they entered the elevator today, they grinned broadly when they read this sign on the door:

"Tom and Gene: Notice, the down capability for this elevator has been removed. Let's have a good flight." It was signed, "The spacecraft crew."

As the new countdown moved along smoothly on schedule, the target satellite with which they will rendezvous in the skies was whirling around toward the Cape in its 29th orbit of the earth. It was launched Wednesday before the Gemini shot was washed out by communications failures.

"We sure hope they make it today," said astronaut Donald K. Slayton as Stafford and Cernan donned spacesuits for the flight. "It's been a struggle."

When the astronauts climbed out of the elevator to enter the spacecraft, they found a poem attached to it and signed by their backup crew, James A. Lowell Jr. and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr.

It read:

"We were kidding before.
"But not any more.
"Get yourselves into space.
"Or we'll take your place."

In their ride to Pad 19, Stafford and Cernan carried a large, mock match, saying it was to help them get off the ground. Stafford looked at Slayton and said, "Let's go do it."

Weather conditions were good at the Cape and around the world all tracking stations were ready to follow the most ambitious flight yet attempted in the U.S. man-to-the-moon program.

The astronauts were awakened shortly after 5 a.m., ate a big breakfast and took brief final physical examinations.

The countdown on their Gemini 9 spacecraft started on schedule at 3:33 a.m. The countdown on the Titan 2 started at 5:33 a.m. shortly after they arose.

The weather forecast called for scattered clouds with easterly winds at around 17 miles an hour.

"This is suitable for launch conditions," said a NASA spokesman.

If all remains on schedule, the thundering Titan 2 rocket will hurl the spacecraft into orbit at 9:39 a.m. At that moment, their target satellite would be whirling 185 miles above the Cape Kennedy area on its 29th circuit of the globe.

Until the astronauts catch the target they won't know whether they'll be able to dock with it. For only then will they be able to solve the mystery of whether a protective covering has jettisoned from the docking collar.

The postponements, adding up to 17 days, placed the launching attempt on an important anniversary in U.S. space flight. One year ago today Edward H. White II became the first American to walk in space as he stepped outside the Gemini 4 craft manned by James A. McDivitt.

Cernan plans to extend man's knowledge in this exciting and important field Saturday by taking a 2½-hour celestial stroll, propelling himself about with a rocket - powered back pack.

The space twins were to chase the satellite -- called ATDA, for Augmented Target Docking Adapter -- at 17,500 miles an hour over a 76,000-mile course, catching it four hours later high above the western Pacific Ocean.

When they are within eyesight of the barrel-shaped ATDA they will be able to determine whether the shroud is on or off. The order in which they exercise various assignments will depend on the shroud.

This element of suspense was added to the flight when ground stations Wednesday received an indication that the ATDA shroud did not eject as planned after the rocket pushed up through the heavy portion of the earth's atmosphere.

Pleas M. Malcolm

Malcolm Dead at Age 63

Postmaster Pleas Matthew Malcolm, 63, died last night in the Missouri Delta Community Hospital at 11:30 p.m. of coronary thrombosis and other complications. He had been a patient in the hospital since Sunday.

Malcolm served as Sikeston's postmaster since August 9, 1939 and was a star football fullback player for the Sikeston Bulldogs from 1919 until he graduated in 1921.

A lifelong Democrat, Malcolm was a former Scott County treasurer, a former member of the county's Democatic committee and former advertising manager of the then twice-a-week Sikeston Standard.

Malcolm always credited his football learned lessons of fair play and temper control with his success as postmaster for 28 years tenure.

Malcolm continued playing football at Central College, Fayette, and Southeast Missouri State College at Cape Girardeau from which he graduated.

He saw Sikeston's mail volume increase four fold, postal receipts from $40,000 to $225,000 a year, the city's population from 5,676 to 13,765, and postal employes from 12 to 60.

Malcolm's post office serves 52 other Southeast Missouri postoffices as a sectional mail handling center.

He was born August 22, 1902 in Sikeston the son of Dr. Pleas M. Malcolm and Martha Jane Perry Malcolm. He was a member of the First Methodist Church and was serving on the board of Stewards and the men's Bible class of that church at the time of his death.

Malcolm was also a member of the National Association of Postmasters, the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce and was serving as president of the board of directors of a local radio station, which he helped establish.

September 2, 1964 the Associated Press ran a story about Malcolm saying, "Pleas Malcolm learned how to plow through the middle of the line, the importance of fair play and how to control his temper on the gridiron more than 40 years ago."

He always said his greatest irritation in life was delays in mail deliveries and the public relations problem of the post office, he said, was same as when he started:

"People think we are overpaid and underworked."

Survivors are his wife, Mrs. Virginia Sharp Malcolm, of the home, 113 Trotter Street, his son, Allen Malcolm of Overland Park, Kansas, a daughter, Mrs. Marjane Bullard of Jonesboro, Ark., five grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by a daughter, Virginia Ann Malcolm, who died December 28, 1962.

Funeral services will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. in the First Methodist Church with Reverends Joseph Wagner and Willard Spencer officiating.

Entombment will follow in the Sikeston City Mausoleum with the Nunnelee Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

To Survey Highway 25 At Malden

MALDEN -- An origin and destination traffic survey, featuring roadside interviews with motorists, will be made in the Malden area by the Missouri State Highway Department beginning Thursday, June 9.

Purpose of the survey, according to the Department is to gather information needed for long range state highway planning in the area.

Barring any delays that may be forced by weather conditions, the survey will be completed by Friday, June 17. No work is planned on Saturday or Sunday, June 11 and 12.

Motorists will be interviewed by two 6-man crews from the Department's Division of Highway Planning in Jefferson City. Art Wollenberg will be in charge of the crews.

Five interviewing stations will be set up on state highways in the Malden area during the survey. However, no more than two stations will be in operation at any one time. The stations will be open only during daylight hours.

Locations of the interviewing stations will be:

On Missouri Route 25 North, a little more than a mile north of Route J; on U. S. Route 62 East, about a mile east of Missouri Route 25; on Missouri Route 25, about a mile south of U.S. Route 62 East; on Route J, about a half mile west of Missouri Route 25; and on Route AB, about three-quarters of a mile southwest of Missouri Route 25.

All traffic will be stopped for interviews. Each interview is expected to take about one minute or less.

Questions to be asked motorists will include the origin and destination of their trip, purpose of the trip and where the vehicle is garaged. Notations also will be made of the type of vehicle, the direction of travel and the number of persons in the vehicle.

In seeking the co-operation of motorists, the Department emphasized that no names will be asked and no personal information sought. Data obtained will be combined to give an overall picture of state highway travel in the area.

Information gathered during survey will be taken to the Department's Main Office in Jefferson City to be processed and analyzed.

Social Security Benefits Increase

WASHINGTON AP -- President Johnson proposed today a blanket increase in Social Security benefits for all those on the rolls now and those who will be in the future. He mentioned no specific figures.

Johnson said he has directed Secretary of Welfare John Gardner to have a program for increased benefits ready for the next session of Congress.

And the President promised the increases would have "a high and major priority."

Johnson's pledge to strive for higher Social Security benefits was made in a White House speech to delegates to a convention of the National Council of Senior Citizens.

Johnson told the delegates that while he has signed into law increases of more than $1.5 billion a year in Social Security benefits, "too many of our older citizens are still struggling along on shoestring incomes, suffering real hardship and real need."

Americans spent $600 million for musical instruments last year and bought over a billion dollars' worth of books.

Third Attempt Lifts Gemini

Thomas D. Stafford

Eugene A. Cernan

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. AP -- The Gemini 9 pilots, smashing a 17-day jinx, rocketed into orbit today and skillfully tracked a target satellite in a 17,500-mile-an-hour chase across the skies.

After two heartbreaking scrubs, a mighty Titan 2 rocket launched astronauts Thomas P. Stafford and Eugene A. Cernan on a vital three-day flight that could bring the U. S. its second space triumph of a busy week.

As the space ship settled into orbit, the pilots went in hot pursuit of a tiny, barrel-shaped satellite launched Wednesday, hoping for a rendezvous with the target high over the Pacific Ocean early this afternoon.

After executing four major orbital changes with bursts of his jet thrusters, Stafford in the first 2 1/4 hours of the flight closed the distance to the target from 640 to about 125 miles.

He also had shifted the Gemini 9 path into almost a perfect circle 170 miles from the earth. At launch, the ship had gone into an orbit ranging from 99 to 172 miles.

"For the third time, go!" Stafford quipped as he sat in the spacecraft poised for the launch.

Just 31 hours after the Surveyor moonship landed softly on the lunar surface and sent back dramatic pictures of possible manned landing sites, the Titan propelled Gemini 9 aloft on a vital, three-day rendezvous and space walk mission.

The big Titan, with the rays of a bright sun glistening on its sides, rose slowly from its launch pad and sped out over the Atlantic Ocean, followed by a big white tail of vapor.

"We're right down the middle," flight director Eugene Kranz shouted.

"Everything," he told Stafford, "is green and go."

"We're on our way!" Stafford yelled exultantly. "It's fantastic."

To make today's launch possible, Stafford faced and overcame the same communications problem that forced Wednesday's shutdown 100 seconds before firing.

A radio guidance command that would have given the spacecraft precise steering directions failed to get through to its computer. This time, the decision was made to go ahead.

Shortly after the Gemini separated from its booster rocket, Stafford fired his jet thrusters to make necessary corrections in the orbit and plan of the space ship and put it on the desired path of pursuit.

Before returning to earth, the astronauts were to perform many of the maneuvers Apollo space men will make on round-trip journeys to the moon.

A year and a day after Edward H. White II became the first American to walk in space, Cernan was to climb out of the space ship Saturday and for 2½ hours hurtle through the skies as a human satellite.

A barrel-shaped target satellite -- fired into orbit Wednesday before a communications failure forced the second scrub of the Gemini launch -- flashed across the Cape as the Titan roared to life.

The 11-foot-long target satellite, a tiny dot in the vastness of space, was entering its 30th revolution of the earth as Stafford and Cernan began their hot pursuit.

They planned to close in on the quarry after a four-hour chase covering 75,000 miles.

With Cernan calculating the maneuver on a computer and Stafford firing the thrusters, the astronauts made a major shift 49 minutes after launching as Gemini 9 whipped high above Australia.

The move lifted the low point of their orbital course from 99 to 144 miles.

When the spacecraft started the chase, the target was 640 miles ahead. After the maneuver, the distance between the two vehicles was reduced to about 460 miles.

The Australian station also passed word that Gemini 9 was good for at least 15 orbits. This was one of three such decisions to be made during the flight after all aspects of the mission are evaluated.

Not until they were within eyesight of the satellite would the astronauts know whether a shroud protecting it from the heat and pressures of plastoff fell away when the target separated from its Atlas booster.

If it had not, they would have to cancel plans for a linkup of the two orbiting vehicles, for the shroud covers the docking collar on the satellite. They would, however, be able to practice a

Floyd Hicks Killed In Freak Accident

Floyd Hicks, 28-year-old greenskeeper at the Sikeston Country Club, was killed yesterday in a freak accident involving a soil grinder, a tractor and a pulley belt.

Hicks, an employe of the club for the past four years, was found dead with his head laying directly against the machine by 15-year-old Charles "Chuck" Meyers at 2:30 p.m.

Meyers had been working with Hicks until the tractor began getting overheated. Meyers went to the club for a pail of water and returned 10 minutes later to find Hicks the victim of the accident.

Hick's death was attributed to a broken neck after being crushed through the pulley.

After Meyers found the body, he ran to the pro shop and got the club golf pro, Gene Dawson. Dawson had his wife call an ambulance. He and Meyers went back to the scene of the tragedy in a golf cart. Dawson said about 10 minutes later the ambulance arrived and the driver said Hicks was dead.

Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Fielding Potashnick said there would be no inquest.

Hicks, who resided at the corner of Smith and Fourth Streets, is survived by his wife, Darla, daughters, Starla and Lauretta, all of the home and daughter Cathy of Buffalo.

Pleas M. Malcolm

Malcolm Dead at Age 63

Postmaster Pleas Matthew Malcolm, 63, died last night in the Missouri Delta Community Hospital at 11:30 p.m. of coronary thrombosis and other complications. He had been a patient in the hospital since Sunday.

Malcolm served as Sikeston's postmaster since August 9, 1939 and was a star football fullback player for the Sikeston Bulldogs from 1919 until he graduated in 1921.

A lifelong Democrat, Malcolm was a former Scott County treasurer, a former member of the county's Democatic committee and former advertising manager of the then twice-a-week Sikeston Standard.

Malcolm always credited his football learned lessons of fair play and temper control with his success as postmaster for 28 years tenure.

Malcolm continued playing football at Central College, Fayette, and Southeast Missouri State College at Cape Girardeau from which he graduated.

He saw Sikeston's mail volume increase four fold, postal receipts from $40,000 to $225,000 a year, the city's population from 5,676 to 13,765, and postal employes from 12 to 60.

Malcolm's post office serves 52 other Southeast Missouri postoffices as a sectional mail handling center.

He was born August 22, 1902 in Sikeston the son of Dr. Pleas M. Malcolm and Martha Jane Perry Malcolm. He was a member of the First Methodist Church and was serving on the board of Stewards and the men's Bible class of that church at the time of his death.

Malcolm was also a member of the National Association of Postmasters, the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce and was serving as president of the board of directors of a local radio station, which he helped establish.

September 2, 1964 the Associated Press ran a story about Malcolm saying, "Pleas Malcolm learned how to plow through the middle of the line, the importance of fair play and how to control his temper on the gridiron more than 40 years ago."

He always said his greatest irritation in life was delays in mail deliveries and the public relations problem of the post office, he said, was same as when he started:

"People think we are overpaid and underworked."

Survivors are his wife, Mrs. Virginia Sharp Malcolm, of the home, 113 Trotter Street, his son, Allen Malcolm of Overland Park, Kansas, a daughter, Mrs. Marjane Bullard of Jonesboro, Ark., five grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by a daughter, Virginia Ann Malcolm, who died December 28, 1962.

Funeral services will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. in the First Methodist Church with Reverends Joseph Wagner and Willard Spencer officiating.

Entombment will follow in the Sikeston City Mausoleum with the Nunnelee Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Questions to be asked motorists will include the origin and destination of their trip, purpose of the trip and where the vehicle is garaged. Notations also will be made of the type of vehicle, the direction of travel and the number of persons in the vehicle.

In seeking the co-operation of motorists, the Department emphasized that no names will be asked and no personal information sought. Data obtained will be combined to give an overall picture of state highway travel in the area.

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. AP -- The Gemini 9 pilots, smashing a 17-day jinx, rocketed into orbit today and skillfully tracked a target satellite in a 17,500-mile-an-hour chase across the skies.

Floyd Hicks Killed In Freak Accident

Floyd Hicks, 28-year-old greenskeeper at the Sikeston Country Club, was killed yesterday in a freak accident involving a soil grinder, a tractor and a pulley belt.

Hicks, an employe of the club for the past four years, was found dead with his head laying directly against the machine by 15-year-old Charles "Chuck" Meyers at 2:30 p.m.

Meyers had been working with Hicks until the tractor began getting overheated. Meyers went to the club for a pail of water and returned 10 minutes later to find Hicks the victim of the accident.

Hick's death was attributed to a broken neck after being crushed through the pulley.

After Meyers found the body, he ran to the pro shop and got the club golf pro, Gene Dawson. Dawson had his wife call an ambulance. He and Meyers went back to the scene of the tragedy in a golf cart. Dawson said about 10 minutes later the ambulance arrived and the driver said Hicks was dead.

Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Fielding Potashnick said there would be no inquest.

Hicks, who resided at the corner of Smith and Fourth Streets, is survived by his wife, Darla, daughters, Starla and Lauretta, all of the home and daughter Cathy of Buffalo.

Other survivors include: his mother, Mrs. Laura Lewis of Sikeston; six brothers, Haywood and Marion Hicks, both of Elkland, Jim Hicks of Orville, Washington, Lloyd and Roy Hicks, both of Sikeston and Harold Hicks of Sacremento, Calif., five sisters, Mrs. Irene Osburn, Charleston, Oregon. Mrs. Ethel Sanders of Elkland, Mrs. Abbie Price of Springfield, Mrs. Edna Penn of Bay City, Mich., and Mrs. Norma Hays of Marshallfield.

Services are set for Sunday at 3:30 p.m. in the North Street Pentecostal Tabernacle with Rev. Freeman Parker officiating. Interment is to follow in the Garden of Memories cemetery with the Nunnelee Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

CHEERFUL TEMPER

In the old Farmer's Almanack, June 1849, it was written, "Perhaps no month tends more to promote a cheerful temper than the present." Now the green tide is at its height; now the hillsides glow with green-gold hues beneath the high-climbing sun; now the meadows are lush with their green and flower-dotted quilts."

This is indeed a season of cheerful temper. The dawn chorus is still strong and exhuberant, and through sun-blessed days the orioles whistle from the elms and barn swallows twitter as they bring nest-building materials to the rafters. Catbirds take time from home construction to sit on garden fence posts and alternately jeer and commend a man as he hoes his potato patch.

Nature has her moods -- even as man. Now when the first rush of spring's urgency is over, one can feel the cheerful temper of the season. Daisies star the meadows; iris still wave flags in the swales; cattails lift slender, pointed leaves around the swamps.

Each day brings us nearer the solstice -- that day of longest daylight when probably more flowers are open than on any other day of the year. This is a time to savor the beauty of the countryside, to walk sun-dappled woodland aisles and to explore the lowlands.

When one stands at meadow-edge or on an upland field and watches the green-gold grass waves ripple ahead of a breeze on a sun-drenched spring day, he knows that this is truly a month of cheerful temper.

"Slow Down and Live."

"The life you save may be your own."

"Drinking Drivers Die."

These broad, emotional appeals are typical of the traffic safety effort in America.

Considering the traditional practicality which is a legacy to American society from its pioneer forbears, perhaps an appeal also should be made to the driver's business sense.

That's what Iowa authorities did. They conducted a test in Polk County (Des Moines), issuing reflective "safety" license plates to 60 per cent of the automobiles. They kept records for a year to see if the cars with reflective plates were involved in fewer accidents than cars with ordinary painted plates.

They were. In fact, the study indicated that if reflective tags had been issued for all cars, they would have prevented losses totalling from $166,000 to $372,000 (depending upon whether you used minimum or maximum figures to compute accident-cost estimates) in damage, death and injury that resulted from the nighttime accidents involving vehicles with ordinary painted plates.

It would have cost $25,000 to reflectorize all license plates issued in Polk County. The return on that $25,000 investment, then, would have been 664 to 1488 per cent.

Motorists were told the outcome of the study. As a result, they showed their business sense by supporting a bill for reflective license plates.

The typical cost of reflectorizing a set of license plates is 50 cents. That 50 cents could save your life. According to the Iowa study, this is the kind of investment that makes sense.

Reflective plates glow from as far away as 2,000 feet in headlights. As a result, they prevent many rear-end collisions involving slow-moving, disabled or parked cars. Seventeen states and the District of Columbia have adopted such tags.

It cost Florida only five cents to reflectorize 1965 plates. That's the amount of the increase in registration fee.

However, Florida is reflectorizing only letters, numerals and border on one plate. Later, says Arch Livingston, Commissioner of the Motor Vehicle Commission, the legislature expects to reflectorize the entire plate and raise the registration fee 12 cents.

By then, Livingston expects such general public approval of reflective plates that there will be little or no opposition to an extra 12 cents.

Livingston believes that Florida motorists will recognize a good investment when they see one. The big question now is: Why don't more states make sound investment in traffic safety, with such plates or any other device that has proved it can save dollars. And lives.

Representative George H. Mahon, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, writes in Nation's Business: " . . . Somebody has to draw a line between what the country stands in need of and what it can afford. We should make a sharper distinction between our wants and our needs than we have done in the last 15 or 20 years. We are too readily inclined to make yesterday's wants today's needs. A great problem in government finance these days is that not enough of us lie awake nights worrying about the fact that we are spending beyond our income . . ."

Now that civil war has hit Uganda and put that nation on the map in a gory way, it is noted that few reporters have spent time there and fewer still have been in the palace of the Kabaka, king of the Buganda.

However, of those very few who realized the importance of that far-off land and of the fewer still who ever talked to the Kabaka in the very palace which was under heavy assault the other day, our columnist Victor Riesel stands out.

Riesel knows the king. The columnist first filed stories from Kampala, capital of Uganda, on August 7, 1959.

At that time, Riesel trekked into Kampala from Eastern Africa to cover the virtually unknown Kampala Labor College there. This trade union college still turns out labor leaders who will head the unions of Africa, which in turn have so much political influence.

I. L. O.'s 50TH SESSION

The International Labor Organization, like most specialized agencies of the United Nations, is little known and often misunderstood. Right-wingers think of it as an instrument of the worldwide Communist conspiracy, while others assume it is some sort of trade-union federation. It is neither, and much more.

I. L. O. was created at the Paris Peace Conference in 1919 to help the working people whose lives and hopes had been shattered by World War I. Although I. L. O.'s first session was held in Washington, with Samuel Gompers in attendance, the United States did not become a member until 1934. Today, this country provides one-third of the organization's budget. And the director general of I. L. O. since 1948 has been David A. Morse, a former U. S. Under Secretary of Labor.

Industrialization heads the agenda of the 50th session of I. L. O. scheduled to begin at Geneva on Sunday, June 5. Other questions include old-age and survivors' pensions, and the role of cooperatives in the economic and social development of developing countries. Previous sessions have produced close to 250 conventions relating to labor conditions.

Delegations to I. L. O. sessions consist of one employer representative, who in this country usually is nominated jointly by the National Association of Manufacturers and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, one labor delegate, nominated by the A.F.L. - C.I.O.; and two government delegates, one from the Labor Department and one from the Commerce Department. George Cabot Lodge, who served as chairman of the 1960 session, has described I.L.O. as "the only organization created to deal with those problems which are most real to the majority of the people in the world: work, wages, security, and the right to freedom and dignity."

NEW YORK AP -- If a man walks into an art museum with a knife and slashes a priceless oil painting into canvas confetti he nets a jail term or at least a stretch on the psychiatirc couch.

But if the same man cuts the heart out of a literary classic by abridging, expurgation, revising or rewriting he nets a fair sum of money.

How come?

Why is it wrong to "improve" a Rembrandt painting by adding a little touch of color but to sin to revise and rewrite A. A. Milne's classic "Winnie the Pooh" becasue you think Milne took too long to say what he had to say?

There's no quick answer, but that doesn't make it right. And the literary lady who announced recently that she planned to remake Pooh and Piglet and Owl and the rest of Milne's characters in her own image is asked to forget it.

Pooh is Pooh or, to coin a paraphrase, IS NO Pooh at all.

It was bad when they made Fagin into a nice guy in a musical comedy. And it was worse when they slashed the glorious thunder from Melville's "Moby Dick" on the ground it interferred with the story's action.

But to kill Christopher Robin? Intolerable!

Why this desire to change things of value? "Brevity," say the changers, "clarity, modernizing."

But not beauty. They always forget beauty.

Who would remember the Gettysburg Address if Lincoln had begun with "Eighty-seven years ago?"

How about changing it from "In the beginning God, etc." to "First God, etc.?" Or, how about "These things are obvious" rather than "We hold these truths to be self-efident?"

Those who prefer the changes ought to be made to write on a blackboard 500 times: "Oh, Lord my God, I am heartily sorry for having offended thee."

But they'll probably write: "Sorry about that."

THE NAVY SAYS

" WELL DONE"

'The American merchant marine has been given the Navy's traditional accolade for superior performance --"Well Done". Back of this lies a significant story.

A short time ago, an assault landing exercise, given the name Steel Pike, was held in southern Spain. All in all some 50,000 men, including 28,000 Marines, participated and huge quantities of equipment and supplies were involved. The Marines had to be able to fight and advance for a full 30 days in enemy territory.

Ninety naval vessels were employed. Along with these, 10 merchant ships, of which eight belong to members of the Committee of American Steamship Lines, were chartered. When the exercise was ended, the commander of the Navy's amphibious forces wrote a letter to the executive director of the Committee in which he said the merchant marine's participation was "an integral and critical element" necessary to the success of the operation, and that the ships' . . . performance proved decisively that they have 'made the team'. "

This high praise was thoroughly earned. The 10 U.S. flag merchant ships, plus a flotilla of Military Sea Transportation Service vessels, carried 90,000 measurement tons of cargo from five U.S. ports 4,500 miles to Spain in a 10-day crossing. And the "new breed" of CASL line freighters, capable of speeds of 19 to 25 knots or better, also provided comfortable living quarters and other facilities for hundreds of Marines of the 2nd Division.

This just touches the highlights of the story. But it shows that our own merchant marine is essential to the national defense as well as to our economic well-being.

OKAY TO STEP ON GAS

America's romance with the automobile is of too long a duration for everyone suddenly to begin believing that everything is wrong with everything about Detroit's leading product.

Recent attacks on the industry have had a telling effect on the public, however. Doubtless anyone who has ever owned a car has been reminded of instances where he paid good money for a vehicle which exhibited something less than care and craftsmanship in its design and construction.

One company's reaction to vociferous critic Ralph Nader-investigation of his private life and even attempted entrapment of him in situations of doubtful morality - left more taste of lemon in mouths than anything that was ever allowed to roll off an assembly line.

Thus it is gratifying to see the four major manufacturers abandoning a pose of outraged innocence and the plea that they be allowed to police themselves and to come out with positive support of national safety standards.

The industry wants a primary role in the writing of these standards, which seems reasonable enough. It wants the 50 states to have a voice, which does not seem quite so unreasonable. It also wants to water down the power that the administration's bill would give to the secretary of commerce to set safety standards, which seems unreasonable pending further clarification.

But at least recognition has been given to the fact that American automobiles are not as safe as they could be. With continued candor and co-operation between Detroit and Washington, there is no reason why the engineers and lawmakers cannot conjointly arrive with all due speed at a safety formula which will eliminate some of the tragedy which too long has been associated with the great American love affair.

DIVIDE TO CONQUER?

Language is an indispensable tool of communication. It can also be used as a weapon of abuse, to mislead, create wrong impressions and induce false thinking. The word weapon is less immediately destructive than some weapons, but it has tremendous power to erode our freedom and sovereignty.

Freedom's enemies have been masterfully trained in the art of the twisted phrase, subtle implication, innuendo, the half-truth useful in inciting dissension between races, classes and religious groups for the purpose of dividing this country's citizenry. The enemy knows that a great part of America's strength lies in the diversity and variety of its people. Jewish people, Negro citizens, Protestants, Catholics, those of English, French, German, Polish or Czech origin, all have contributed to the greatness of this land. Communism, which has never been able to match the strength generated in this free country by these free people, must first divide and splinter that strength before it can undermine their freedom.

Organizations with noble-sounding titles have been set up which charge patriots with being anti-Semitic and anti-union-labor. These organizations make a practice of offering the name of one person as being in some way connected with another to prove that both are guilty of anti-minority prejudice and practice when, in fact, neither has ever been known to have engaged in anti-Semitic or other "anti" practices or utterances.

Accusing patriots of being anti-Semitic is a favorite weapon of the enemy, who fear the strength this country draws from the resourcefulness, ingenuity, industry, good business practices and dedication to independence of its Jewish citizens more than any of its other assets.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Republican congressmen attempted to put the Democrats in the position of defending the liquor lobby when 30 energetic house members acted to raise the drinking age in the District of Columbia from 18 to 21, thereby making it coincide with the drinking age in Maryland and Virginia.

Hilliard Schulberg, chief lobbyist for the Washington Retail Liquor Dealers Association, is now busy buttonholding Democrats to try to overrule the Republican amendment. He calls increasing the drinking age from 18 to 21: "A monster - economically, morally, and socially bad."

Spearheading the Republicans who wanted to remove the nation's capital as a mecca of teenage drinking were William Harsha, Ohio, Thomas Pelly, Wash., William Bray, Ind., William Springer, Ill., Ancher Nelsen, Minn., and H.R. Gross, Iowa. Charles Joelson of New Jersey was the only Democrat who actively supported them.

Joelson declared: "The state of New York has an 18-year-old age limit, and we in New Jersey have a requirement of 21 years. The youngsters go to New York City and are involved in horrible automobile accidents. There is a tragedy almost every weekend; let us here in the nation's capital learn from bitter experience."

Minnesota's Nelsen had introduced a bill two years ago to change the drinking law in the nation's capital, but Democrats on the District of Columbia committee bottled it up.

Said Rep. Pelly of Washington state: "I have occasion every week to watch these cars that are driven by young people with Virginia license plates who come over and park around the various residential neighborhoods. They come late at night and leave empty beer cans and bottles on our parking strips."

Said Rep. Harsha: "The nation's capital has become an oasis for juvenile drinking. . . Youths of both sexes shout oaths and profanity, smash car windows, break neighborhood fencing. Beer bottles are thrown through house windows. Autos and motorcycles race up and down district streets. There is loud blowing of horns in the early hours of the morning, street fighting, in other words, a general disturbing of the peace and quiet in the District of Columbia."

It will be interesting to see what the Democrats, who control both the House and Senate District committees and both houses of congress do about the Republicans' "Head Start" program for teenagers in the nation's capital.

NO DODDISM HERE

No matter what the Senate Ethics committee may do regarding Sen. Tom Dodd, D-Conn., the publicity regarding his activities is already having its effect.

Not only has President Johnson sent a proposal to congress regarding the regulation of campaign funds, but the other day in Springfield, Ill., Harry G. Taylor, President of the Illinois Republican County Chairmen's Association, clearly indicated that he had been reading the columns regarding Tom Dodd.

Reported the Illinois State Register: "Drew Pearson's and Jack Anderson's column you have been reading in the Register about Sen. Thomas J. Dodd's alleged misuse of campaign funds have the entire congress of the United States shaken up.

"At the $50-a-plate fund raising dinner in Decatur Sunday night, Harry G. (Skinny) Taylor went to great lengths to explain how the money would be used.

"He said Thomas Harris of Lincoln, Republican state committeeman, would appoint a committee to distribute the funds. One of the committee members will be a certified public accountant.

" 'I think it should be known that none of the funds received by the committee will be used for any personal expenditures of congressman Springer,' Taylor said."

BIG MONEY TALKS

Senate campaigns are not the only place where the big money talks big.

It also talks big in influencing some of the pipeline cases which affect gas and oil to millions of housewives and thousands of factory owners.

It's difficult for newspapermen to dig out the facts on all these cases, but in regard to El Paso Natural Gas, the company which supplies gas to most of California, here are some of the fees paid to high-powered attorneys to maintain El Paso's near monopoly:

Sullivan and Cromwell, the Wall Street firm of the late John Foster Dulles, was paid $946,-645.54 for its legal work before the Federal Power Commission and the U. S. Courts.

Nixon, Mudge, Rose, Guthrie and Alexander, the New York firm of former Vice President Richard Nixon, was paid $77,-629.20.

G. Bentley Ryan, the Los Angeles attorney who raised money for Mayor Sam Yorty's testimonial dinner, was paid $254.61.

All these are legal fees and are a matter of record, filed with various government agencies. Not of record are the fees paid by El Paso to Clark Clifford, the adviser to presidents and now under consideration to be under secretary of state for LBJ; or the fee paid by Clifford to Larry L. Williams, formerly of the antitrust division, who handled the El Paso case for the justice department. Williams formed the Clifford law firm after he left the justice department.

It's significant that thanks to the tenacity of one underpaid California servant, William M. Bennett of of the California Public Utilities Commission, all of these lawyers were beaten.

Bennett stuck to his guns, persisted in appealing various lower court rulings to the supreme court and has won. Bennett receives a salary of only $26,000 a year from the state of California.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Senate Racket Probers Dig Into $85 Billion Pension Funds.

Washington, D. C.: -- Even in this capital today, $85 billion is considered a fair amount of cash to have on hand.

That's about what there is in the private labor - management pension funds at the moment and Sen. John McClellan, the other gentleman from Arkansas, is making a long and anguished appraisal of how this money is being handled, invested and spent.

The Senator's sensitivity to rackets and his proclivity to "busting" them is sharper than ever.

His chief of staff, Jerry Adlerman, and two experienced probers have just returned from New York where they did some muckraking amongst lost millions.

The national atmosphere is acrid with gunsmoke of two San Francisco area murders which have created a pension and welfare mystery on the Coast.

There is looting in several other cities.

Here in the East at least one fund totaling some four to five million dollars was slowly being transplanted into Swiss and other foreign -- and unreachable -- banks when Sen. McClellan stopped the gold flow.

But the latest racket investigation is scalpeling into pension cash controlled entirely by employers.

Generally the public believes all such funds are administered by a joint management- labor board of trustees. Not so.

Of some 34,500 such retirement benefit plans, many thousands are run by unions alone or by corporations. Amongst the latter are those handled by the big auto and steel firms. They are unimpeachable.

From time to time the unions, such as Walter Reuther's auto workers, bid for joint administrative authority.

And there are thousands of retirement funds which are handled exclusively by smaller firms. These systems have assets in the billions, though individually they total anywhere from a million to 20 times as much.

Mr. McClellan's investigators for some time now have secretly been examining the unethical fringe of the employer -- controlled "fringe benefit plans."

In New York the probers have been going over the books of some companies which put their contributions to employes' pension funds into the stock market.

Money is made by company executives through a simple racket.

They buy securities on the open market. Then they sell the shares to the pension fund at a higher price. And they pocket the difference.

Since the funds run into the millions, tens of thousands of shares can be picked up and resold to the pension fund at a sizeable profit per share. In effect, this lowers the coverage of the firms' workers, who are entitled to top benefits the pension money can buy them.

The firms' contributions are not made voluntarily. These are negotiated as part of the union contract but are handled by the company executives.

There is another angle to the stock manipulation.

Some firms have been buying their own public stock to support its price on the open stock exchanges. Thus when the price has run down, the firm, if unethical, will take the pension money and buy heavily to support it.

The executives with big portfolios will then unload at the higher price. The losers are the workers because the pension fund's cash is depleted and the stock generally is shaky.

For years now the Securities Exchange Commission and the Internal Revenue Service have been watching such developments. But their authority gets hemmed in by the legal maneuvers of the unethical operators.

So Sen. McClellan has taken some out of the rackets probes -- which are still on the back burners -- to rip open these muck packs.

Hr's heading for a public hearing this fall.

The racket buster's objective is to block any proliferation of legal looting on either side of the labor - management field.

Few are aware that the pension funds accumulate at the rate of over $4 billion annually. In 10 years, as the current 25 million workers now covered increase, there is to be at least $170 billion in the funds. This is worth protecting.

The Labor Dept.'s theorists and realists agree. Under Secy. of Labor Wirtz' direction they have alerted all fund administrators that they will be expected to give considerably more details in future reports to the government.

The expanded filing will have to show a more detailed breakdown of the insurance premium dollar, acturial data on which premiums and benefits are based, and complete listing of assets and liabilities, and a changed method of reporting inflow and outgo of money.

That's all to the good. Men may not live by bread alone.

But they will live more comfortably if they know that the money intended for their bread and butter in their old age is being safeguarded.

Motorists were told the outcome of the study. As a result, they showed their business sense by supporting a bill for reflective license plates.

The typical cost of reflectorizing a set of license plates is 50 cents. That 50 cents could save your life. According to the Iowa study, this is the kind of investment that makes sense.

Reflective plates glow from as far away as 2,000 feet in headlights. As a result, they prevent many rear-end collisions involving slow-moving, disabled or parked cars. Seventeen states and the District of Columbia have adopted such tags.

It cost Florida only five cents to reflectorize 1965 plates. That's the amount of the increase in registration fee.

However, Florida is reflectorizing only letters, numerals and border on one plate. Later, says Arch Livingston, Commissioner of the Motor Vehicle Commission, the legislature expects to reflectorize the entire plate and raise the registration fee 12 cents.

By then, Livingston expects such general public approval of reflective plates that there will be little or no opposition to an extra 12 cents.

Livingston believes that Florida motorists will recognize a good investment when they see one. The big question now is: Why don't more states make sound investment in traffic safety, with such plates or any other device that has proved it can save dollars. And lives.

Representative George H. Mahon, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, writes in Nation's Business: " . . . Somebody has to draw a line between what the country stands in need of and what it can afford. We should make a sharper distinction between our wants and our needs than we have done in the last 15 or 20 years. We are too readily inclined to make yesterday's wants today's needs. A great problem in government finance these days is that not enough of us lie awake nights worrying about the fact that we are spending beyond our income . . ."

Now that civil war has hit Uganda and put that nation on the map in a gory way, it is noted that few reporters have spent time there and fewer still have been in the palace of the Kabaka, king of the Buganda.

However, of those very few who realized the importance of that far-off land and of the fewer still who ever talked to the Kabaka in the very palace which was under heavy assault the other day, our columnist Victor Riesel stands out.

Riesel knows the king. The columnist first filed stories from Kampala, capital of Uganda, on August 7, 1959.

At that time, Riesel trekked into Kampala from Eastern Africa to cover the virtually unknown Kampala Labor College there. This trade union college still turns out labor leaders who will head the unions of Africa, which in turn have so much political influence.

I. L. O.'s 50TH SESSION

The International Labor Organization, like most specialized agencies of the United Nations, is little known and often misunderstood. Right-wingers think of it as an instrument of the worldwide Communist conspiracy, while others assume it is some sort of trade-union federation. It is neither, and much more.

I. L. O. was created at the Paris Peace Conference in 1919 to help the working people whose lives and hopes had been shattered by World War I. Although I. L. O.'s first session was held in Washington, with Samuel Gompers in attendance, the United States did not become a member until 1934. Today, this country provides one-third of the organization's budget. And the director general of I. L. O. since 1948 has been David A. Morse, a former U. S. Under Secretary of Labor.

Industrialization heads the agenda of the 50th session of I. L. O. scheduled to begin at Geneva on Sunday, June 5. Other questions include old-age and survivors' pensions, and the role of cooperatives in the economic and social development of developing countries. Previous sessions have produced close to 250 conventions relating to labor conditions.

Delegations to I. L. O. sessions consist of one employer representative, who in this country usually is nominated jointly by the National Association of Manufacturers and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, one labor delegate, nominated by the A.F.L. - C.I.O.; and two government delegates, one from the Labor Department and one from the Commerce Department. George Cabot Lodge, who served as chairman of the 1960 session, has described I.L.O. as "the only organization created to deal with those problems which are most real to the majority of the people in the world: work, wages, security, and the right to freedom and dignity."

The American Meat Institute reports that pork has changed. Some people, it says, still have the image of pork as fat meat. This is no longer true. Farmers have made tremendous strides in producing a new, meat-type hog which has more of the lean cuts preferred by today's homemaker. This hog, the Institute stresses, is a far cry from the plump, jowly hog of grandfather's day.

NEW YORK AP -- If a man walks into an art museum with a knife and slashes a priceless oil painting into canvas confetti he nets a jail term or at least a stretch on the psychiatirc couch.

But if the same man cuts the heart out of a literary classic by abridging, expurgation, revising or rewriting he nets a fair sum of money.

How come?

Why is it wrong to "improve" a Rembrandt painting by adding a little touch of color but to sin to revise and rewrite A. A. Milne's classic "Winnie the Pooh" becasue you think Milne took too long to say what he had to say?

There's no quick answer, but that doesn't make it right. And the literary lady who announced recently that she planned to remake Pooh and Piglet and Owl and the rest of Milne's characters in her own image is asked to forget it.

Pooh is Pooh or, to coin a paraphrase, IS NO Pooh at all.

It was bad when they made Fagin into a nice guy in a musical comedy. And it was worse when they slashed the glorious thunder from Melville's "Moby Dick" on the ground it interferred with the story's action.

But to kill Christopher Robin? Intolerable!

Why this desire to change things of value? "Brevity," say the changers, "clarity, modernizing."

But not beauty. They always forget beauty.

Who would remember the Gettysburg Address if Lincoln had begun with "Eighty-seven years ago?"

How about changing it from "In the beginning God, etc." to "First God, etc.?" Or, how about "These things are obvious" rather than "We hold these truths to be self-efident?"

Those who prefer the changes ought to be made to write on a blackboard 500 times: "Oh, Lord my God, I am heartily sorry for having offended thee."

But they'll probably write: "Sorry about that."

"So One Guy Sez 'We Can Wipe You Out!' an' the Other Guy Sez 'We Can Wipe You Out!' an' POW!"

THE NAVY SAYS " WELL DONE"

'The American merchant marine has been given the Navy's traditional accolade for superior performance -- "Well Done". Back of this lies a significant story.

A short time ago, an assault landing exercise, given the name Steel Pike, was held in southern Spain. All in all some 50,000 men, including 28,000 Marines, participated and huge quantities of equipment and supplies were involved. The Marines had to be able to fight and advance for a full 30 days in enemy territory.

Ninety naval vessels were employed. Along with these, 10 merchant ships, of which eight belong to members of the Committee of American Steamship Lines, were chartered.

When the exercise was ended, the commander of the Navy's amphibious forces wrote a letter to the executive director of the Committee in which he said the merchant marine's participation was "an integral and critical element" necessary to the success of the operation, and that the ships' . . . performance proved decisively that they have 'made the team'."

This high praise was thoroughly earned. The 10 U.S. flag merchant ships, plus a flotilla of Military Sea Transportation Service vessels, carried 90,000 measurement tons of cargo from five U.S. ports 4,500 miles to Spain in a 10-day crossing. And the "new breed" of CASL line freighters, capable of speeds of 19 to 25 knots or better, also provided comfortable living quarters and other facilities for hundreds of Marines of the 2nd Division.

This just touches the highlights of the story. But it shows that our own merchant marine is essential to the national defense as well as to our economic well-being.

OKAY TO STEP ON GAS

America's romance with the automobile is of too long a duration for everyone suddenly to begin believing that everything is wrong with everything about Detroit's leading product.

Recent attacks on the industry have had a telling effect on the public, however. Doubtless anyone who has ever owned a car has been reminded of instances where he paid good money for a vehicle which exhibited something less than care and craftsmanship in its design and construction.

One company's reaction to vociferous critic Ralph Nader-investigation of his private life and even attempted entrapment of him in situations of doubtful morality - left more taste of lemon in mouths than anything that was ever allowed to roll off an assembly line.

Thus it is gratifying to see the four major manufacturers abandoning a pose of outraged innocence and the plea that they be allowed to police themselves and to come out with positive support of national safety standards.

The industry wants a primary role in the writing of these standards, which seems reasonable enough. It wants the 50 states to have a voice, which does not seem quite so unreasonable. It also wants to water down the power that the administration's bill would give to the secretary of commerce to set safety standards, which seems unreasonable pending further clarification.

But at least recognition has been given to the fact that American automobiles are not as safe as they could be. With continued candor and co-operation between Detroit and Washington, there is no reason why the engineers and lawmakers cannot conjointly arrive with all due speed at a safety formula which will eliminate some of the tragedy which too long has been associated with the great American love affair.

They don't know how to answer objections.

They can't motivate themselves.

Apparently there is one thing all parties and peoples both rich and poor, high and low agree on, that is that the inefficient, irresponsible office-holders should be relieved of the job of dispensing taxpayer's money. it has reached the point that taxpayers money could be called blood-money. looks like in many instances its being handled like it was confederate currency, or post-war German marks, got to be some changes made.

DIVIDE TO CONQUER?

Language is an indispensable tool of communication. It can also be used as a weapon of abuse, to mislead, create wrong impressions and induce false thinking. The word weapon is less immediately destructive than some weapons, but it has tremendous power to erode our freedom and sovereignty.

Freedom's enemies have been masterfully trained in the art of the twisted phrase, subtle implication, innuendo, the half-truth useful in inciting dissension between races, classes and religious groups for the purpose of dividing this country's citizenry. The enemy knows that a great part of America's strength lies in the diversity and variety of its people. Jewish people, Negro citizens, Protestants, Catholics, those of English, French, German, Polish or Czech origin, all have contributed to the greatness of this land. Communism, which has never been able to match the strength generated in this free country by these free people, must first divide and splinter that strength before it can undermine their freedom.

Organizations with noble-sounding titles have been set up which charge patriots with being anti-Semitic and anti-union-labor. These organizations make a practice of offering the name of one person as being in some way connected with another to prove that both are guilty of anti-minority prejudice and practice when, in fact, neither has ever been known to have engaged in anti-Semitic or other "anti" practices or utterances.

Accusing patriots of being anti-Semitic is a favorite weapon of the enemy, who fear the strength this country draws from the resourcefulness, ingenuity, industry, good business practices and dedication to independence of its Jewish citizens more than any of its other assets.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Republican congressmen attempted to put the Democrats in the position of defending the liquor lobby when 30 energetic house members acted to raise the drinking age in the District of Columbia from 18 to 21, thereby making it coincide with the drinking age in Maryland and Virginia.

Hilliard Schulberg, chief lobbyist for the Washington Retail Liquor Dealers Association, is now busy buttonholding Democrats to try to overrule the Republican amendment. He calls increasing the drinking age from 18 to 21: "A monster - economically, morally, and socially bad."

Spearheading the Republicans who wanted to remove the nation's capital as a mecca of teenage drinking were William Harsha, Ohio, Thomas Pelly, Wash., William Bray, Ind., William Springer, Ill., Ancher Nelsen, Minn., and H.R. Gross, Iowa. Charles Joelson of New Jersey was the only Democrat who actively supported them.

Joelson declared: "The state of New York has an 18-year-old age limit, and we in New Jersey have a requirement of 21 years. The youngsters go to New York City and are involved in horrible automobile accidents. There is a tragedy almost every weekend; let us here in the nation's capital learn from bitter experience."

Minnesota's Nelsen had introduced a bill two years ago to change the drinking law in the nation's capital, but Democrats on the District of Columbia committee bottled it up.

Said Rep. Pelly of Washington state: "I have occasion every week to watch these cars that are driven by young people with Virginia license plates who come over and park around the various residential neighborhoods. They come late at night and leave empty beer cans and bottles on our parking strips."

Said Rep. Harsha: "The nation's capital has become an oasis for juvenile drinking. . . Youths of both sexes shout oaths and profanity, smash car windows, break neighborhood fencing. Beer bottles are thrown through house windows. Autos and motorcycles race up and down district streets. There is loud blowing of horns in the early hours of the morning, street fighting, in other words, a general disturbing of the peace and quiet in the District of Columbia."

It will be interesting to see what the Democrats, who control both the House and Senate District committees and both houses of congress do about the Republicans' "Head Start" program for teenagers in the nation's capital.

NO DODDISM HERE

No matter what the Senate Ethics committee may do regarding Sen. Tom Dodd, D-Conn., the publicity regarding his activities is already having its effect.

Not only has President Johnson sent a proposal to congress regarding the regulation of campaign funds, but the other day in Springfield, Ill., Harry G. Taylor, President of the Illinois Republican County Chairmen's Association, clearly indicated that he had been reading the columns regarding Tom Dodd.

Reported the Illinois State Register: "Drew Pearson's and Jack Anderson's column you have been reading in the Register about Sen. Thomas J. Dodd's alleged misuse of campaign funds have the entire congress of the United States shaken up.

"At the $50-a-plate fund raising dinner in Decatur Sunday night, Harry G. (Skinny) Taylor went to great lengths to explain how the money would be used.

"He said Thomas Harris of Lincoln, Republican state committeeman, would appoint a committee to distribute the funds. One of the committee members will be a certified public accountant.

" 'I think it should be known that none of the funds received by the committee will be used for any personal expenditures of congressman Springer,' Taylor said."

BIG MONEY TALKS

Senate campaigns are not the only place where the big money talks big.

It also talks big in influencing some of the pipeline cases which affect gas and oil to millions of housewives and thousands of factory owners.

It's difficult for newspapermen to dig out the facts on all these cases, but in regard to El Paso Natural Gas, the company which supplies gas to most of California, here are some of the fees paid to high-powered attorneys to maintain El Paso's near monopoly:

Sullivan and Cromwell, the Wall Street firm of the late John Foster Dulles, was paid $946,645.54 for its legal work before the Federal Power Commission and the U. S. Courts.

Nixon, Mudge, Rose, Guthrie and Alexander, the New York firm of former Vice President Richard Nixon, was paid $77,629.20.

G. Bentley Ryan, the Los Angeles attorney who raised money for Mayor Sam Yorty's testimonial dinner, was paid $254.61.

All these are legal fees and are a matter of record, filed with various government agencies. Not of record are the fees paid by El Paso to Clark Clifford, the adviser to presidents and now under consideration to be under secretary of state for LBJ; or the fee paid by Clifford to Larry L. Williams, formerly of the antitrust division, who handled the El Paso case for the justice department. Williams formed the Clifford law firm after he left the justice department.

It's significant that thanks to the tenacity of one underpaid California servant, William M. Bennett of of the California Public Utilities Commission, all of these lawyers were beaten.

Bennett stuck to his guns, persisted in appealing various lower court rulings to the supreme court and has won. Bennett receives a salary of only $26,000 a year from the state of California.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Senate Racket Probers Dig Into $85 Billion Pension Funds.

Washington, D. C.: -- Even in this capital today, $85 billion is considered a fair amount of cash to have on hand.

That's about what there is in the private labor - management pension funds at the moment and Sen. John McClellan, the other gentleman from Arkansas, is making a long and anguished appraisal of how this money is being handled, invested and spent.

The Senator's sensitivity to rackets and his proclivity to "busting" them is sharper than ever.

His chief of staff, Jerry Adlerman, and two experienced probers have just returned from New York where they did some muckraking amongst lost millions.

The national atmosphere is acrid with gunsmoke of two San Francisco area murders which have created a pension and welfare mystery on the Coast.

There is looting in several other cities.

Here in the East at least one fund totaling some four to five million dollars was slowly being transplanted into Swiss and other foreign -- and unreachable -- banks when Sen. McClellan stopped the gold flow.

But the latest racket investigation is scalpeling into pension cash controlled entirely by employers.

Generally the public believes all such funds are administered by a joint management- labor board of trustees. Not so.

Of some 34,500 such retirement benefit plans, many thousands are run by unions alone or by corporations. Amongst the latter are those handled by the big auto and steel firms. They are unimpeachable.

From time to time the unions, such as Walter Reuther's auto workers, bid for joint administrative authority.

And there are thousands of retirement funds which are handled exclusively by smaller firms. These systems have assets in the billions, though individually they total anywhere from a million to 20 times as much.

Mr. McClellan's investigators for some time now have secretly been examining the unethical fringe of the employer -- controlled "fringe benefit plans."

In New York the probers have been going over the books of some companies which put their contributions to employes' pension funds into the stock market.

Money is made by company executives through a simple racket.

They buy securities on the open market. Then they sell the shares to the pension fund at a higher price. And they pocket the difference.

Since the funds run into the millions, tens of thousands of shares can be picked up and resold to the pension fund at a sizeable profit per share. In effect, this lowers the coverage of the firms' workers, who are entitled to top benefits the pension money can buy them.

The firms' contributions are not made voluntarily. These are negotiated as part of the union contract but are handled by the company executives.

There is another angle to the stock manipulation.

Some firms have been buying their own public stock to support its price on the open stock exchanges. Thus when the price has run down, the firm, if unethical, will take the pension money and buy heavily to support it.

The executives with big portfolios will then unload at the higher price. The losers are the workers because the pension fund's cash is depleted and the stock generally is shaky.

For years now the Securities Exchange Commission and the Internal Revenue Service have been watching such developments. But their authority gets hemmed in by the legal maneuvers of the unethical operators.

So Sen. McClellan has taken some out of the rackets probes -- which are still on the back burners -- to rip open these muck packs.

Hr's heading for a public hearing this fall.

The racket buster's objective is to block any proliferation of legal looting on either side of the labor - management field.

Few are aware that the pension funds accumulate at the rate of over $4 billion annually. In 10 years, as the current 25 million workers now covered increase, there is to be at least $170 billion in the funds. This is worth protecting.

The Labor Dept.'s theorists and realists agree. Under Secy. of Labor Wirtz' direction they have alerted all fund administrators that they will be expected to give considerably more details in future reports to the government.

The expanded filing will have to show a more detailed breakdown of the insurance premium dollar, acturial data on which premiums and benefits are based, and complete listing of assets and liabilities, and a changed method of reporting inflow and outgo of money.

That's all to the good. Men may not live by bread alone.

But they will live more comfortably if they know that the money intended for their bread and butter in their old age is being safeguarded.

A woman in a handsome new car pulled up to the spot where there were three empty parking spaces. She gaily backed in until she hit the car behind her with a loud bang. Then she pulled forward and smacked into the car ahead. The crash attracted the attention of the policeman on the corner. The woman realized that he was watching her, so she leaned out of the window and called cheerfully, "Did I park all right, officer?"

"I suppose so, lady," he snapped. "But do you always park by ear?"

Glenda Joann Lemmons Says Vows With Stanley T. Gregg

Miss Glenda Joann Lemmons, daughter of Mrs. Iona Lemmons, 846 Ruth St., and Stanley T. Gregg, route one Dexter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ho[illegible] of Bernie, were married at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Don C. Glover officiated at the double ring ceremony at the Church of Christ on South Kingshighway. The church was simply decorated with a palm arrangement on either side of a large basket of white gladioli enhanced with a huge rose bow. The family pews were marked with white bows.

Mike Hanks, son of Elder E. A. Hanks, was in charge of the recorded organ music.

The bride, given in marriage by her mother, wore a street - length white sheath worn with a floor - length wrap-around skirt of lined lace. A satin bow in the front at the waist adorned her attire. The dress was styled with a jewel neckline and short sleeves. Her only jewelry was a rhinestone heart pendant, a gift of the groom's daughter. The "something borrowed" theme of the bridal attire was carried out in her fingertip veil secured by a white jeweled flower and the lace - covered white Bible topped with red roses and decorated with white satin streamers tied in lovers' knots.

Carol Britton, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Junior bridesmaids were Sheryl Lemmons, sister of the bride, and Patsy Gregg, daughter of the groom. The attendants wore dresses styled after the bride's but in white over pink. Their headpieces were pillboxes covered with self - fabric and straw and chin - length veils. They carried nosegays of rose chrysanthemums.

Morris Gregg of Dexter, the groom's cousin, was best man. Danny and Kenny Gregg, sons of the groom, were junior escorts.

The bride's mother wore a blue lace sheath and a blue straw hat. She wore blue gloves, white shoes and a corsage of pink carnations.

The reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Lynn, 123 Baker Lane. The bride's table was covered with a white linen cloth and centered with a large three tier cake topped with a miniature bridal couple. A silver punch bowl, candelabra and mint dishes also appointed the table. Greenery and pink carnations were used in decorating.

Serving at the reception were Mrs. Margaret Lynn, Mrs. Cleatus Lemmons, and Mrs. Barbara Glover. Miss Betty Reed was in charge of the guest book.

The bride's going away costume was the street - length sheath of her wedding dress worn with white accessories and a corsage of red roses from her bouquet.

The couple is now at home on route one, Dexter.

The new Mrs. Gregg was a former teacher at Lee Hunter School. She will now teach the second grade at Bernie school.

The groom is a farmer.

Yancey Leads Memphis Open Golfers

MEMPHIS, Tenn. AP -- Perhaps Bert Yancey should have saved that remarkable round for another day.

The 27-year-old pro fired a seven-under-par 63 in the first round of the $100,000 Memphis Open Golf Tournament Thursday. That matched the Colonial Country Club course record and pushed him into a three-stroke lead.

But Yancey will be fighting history -- as well as the tough field of challengers -- the rest of the way.

For in the eight previous Memphis Opens, no first-round leader has wound up champion.

Some of the better known pros, including defending champion Jack Nicklaus, are at least seven strokes back. Nicklaus had a 72, Gary Player and Gay Brewer had 70s, Ben Hogan 71, and Julius Boros, Johnny Pott, Tommy Bolt and Joe Campbell 72s.

Yancey's closest pursuers heading into today's second round were left-hander Bob Charles, Dale Douglass, Gene Littler and Wright Garrett at 66. Next at 67 were Homero Blancas, Bob Ginsberg, Bruce Devlin, Jack Rule, Bob Goalby and Dick Litz.

Bert Yancey attributed most of his success to his putting, but all of his game was solid yesterday in a round of 63 that gave him the lead on the first day of the Memphis Open golf tournament.

The blond Philadelphian discovered the putting touch early and he used only 28 putts for the day. "I knew at the third hole I was putting well and I could have had a 62 as easily as a 63, I thought I had it on No. 9 (his 18th hole)."

Yancey's 63 tied the Colonial Country Club competitive course record and his birdie putt for a 62 on the final hole slid only inches off the mark. He shot his first nine (Colonial's back nine) in four-under-par 32 and finished with a three-under-par 31.

Thirty members of the 144-man field broke par in the opening round of the $100,000 tournament. Thirteen more were at par 70.

Bob Charles, the New Zealand lefthander, put a 66 on the board and led for four hours. Three others -- Dale Douglass, Gene Littler, and Wright Garrett -- later joined Charles at four under par. A half dozen were at 67, four were at 68, and 15 were at 69.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus, stricken by a triple bogie five holes out, finished at 72. Don January, three under and a threat at one point, carded a triple bogie and had a 71. The triple bogies were brought on by out-of-bounds shots, Nicklaus' on the 14th hole and January's on the seventh.

Rod Funseth set a fast pace early in the day, going 11 holes in five under par, but a double bogie and two bogies gave him a 69. Mason Rudolph of Clarksville, Tenn., shot his first nine holes in three-under par, but bogied 10,11,13 and 14, finishing the back nine with a 40 for a 71 total.

Cary Middlecoff of Memphis shot even par.

Many in the record first-day gallery of 10,283 fell in behind the threesome of Littler, Ben Hogan and Bert Weaver. Littler had won the Wednesday proam with a 63 and shot that and three strokes more yesterday. Hogan started well (33) but ended with a 38 for 71. Weaver shot 72.

For a time Yancey had competition from the other members of his threesome. Don Massengale went through 14 holes three under par, but bogied six, seven and nine for a 70. Jim Ferree was one under through 14 but finished at 71.

"Many times the very fact you are playing well breaks your concentration," Yancey said, "But I managed to ward off that problem."

Cards Held To 7-Hits, Lose 2-0

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Those lowly A's continued their uprising against the American League leading Indians Thursday night, battering Cleveland for 14 hits and an 11-4 victory that lifted them into ninth place.

Ralph Terry received credit for the victory, his first against three losses, but needed help from Lew Krausse over the last three innings. Terry yielded 7 hits and one run and Krausse was charged with three hits and three runs.

Campy Campaneris, who had been hospitalized since Wednesday night with a muscle spasm in his back, returned to the line-up to pace the attack with two singles, a double, triple and two stolen bases.

In St. Louis pitchers Don Sutton and Ron Perranoski combined efforts to set the Cardinals down on 7-hits as the Dodgers posted a 2-0 shutout.

West Parker singled home the Dodgers first run in the fifth and Al Ferrara drove in the second in the seventh on a punch-hit single. Nelson Briles was the Card loser.

Curt Flood had three hits for St. Louis and Tim McCarver got two. The Cards left eight men on base and the Dodgers 10.

Los Angeles now has won nine of its last 10 games.

The A's pummeled four Cleveland pitchers. Starter Gary Bell was the victim of record, suffering his second loss against four victories.

Mike Hershberger got three hits and drove in three runs and Dick Green and Ken Harrelson had two hits apiece and each drove in two runs.

Kansas City's biggst inning was the seventh when the A's sent five runs across the plate. A principal victim of the inning was Dick, The Monster, Radatz, the 260-pound relief artist acquired by the Indians only a few hours earlier from Boston.

Radatz led off by walking Krausse, Campaneris doubled, and then followed two more hits and three bases on balls and the big righthander went to the showers.

Tonight the A's open in Baltimore with Jim Hunter scheduled to start against Jim Palmer of the Orioles.

St. Louis moves to Atlanta where Bob Gibson will be called on in hopes of returning the Cards to the victory column against Hank Fischer and the Braves.

Dean Oliver Leads Rodeo Circuit

DENVER - Halfway through the 1966 rodeo season Idaho's rangy Dean Oliver leads the big - hatted pros in prize money take, just as he has for the last three years.

Naming the current top ten winners in the game's various event categories Tuesday, the Rodeo Cowboys Association here said Oliver, 36, from Boise, has won $15,978 so far bidding for a fourth term as the annual all-around cowboy champion.

But, some 400 R.C.A.-sanctioned rodeos are ahead in the latter half of 1966 before Oliver will be sure of his crown.

Trailing Oliver in the sweepstakes title race is another roper-wrestler, Bob Ragsdale, 29, Chowchilla, Calif., with $13,451. Third place is owned by Paul Mayo, 24, Grinnell, with $12,309, collected in riding events.

Ragsdale, who joined pro ranks from Montana high school rodeo competition, is enjoying the best season of his career. Most of his money comes from calf roping where he trails Ron Sewalt, 24, Chico, Tex., by just $109 for the event's title lead. Sewalt has snared $10,189.

Other event leaders are Mayo, with $9,280, bareback bronc riding; Bill Smith, 25, Cody, Wyo., with $8,597 saddle bronc riding; Bob Wegner, 31, Auburn, Wash., with $7,647, bull riding; and Jack Roddy, 29, San Jose, Calif., with $8,121, steer wrestling.

Lion's share of the payoff went to Jim Bob Altizer, 33, Del Rio, Tex., the calf roping victor.

Braves Believe In Southern Hospitality

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Sure Atlanta belives in Southern hospitality.

But giving up four runs on a single. . . .!

That's what happened to Bobby Bragan's charitable Braves Thursday night when San Francisco handed Atlanta its sixth straight setback, 5-0.

Outfielder Felipe Alou was the goat on Cap Peterson's sixth inning single that broke open a 1-0 game. The bases were loaded on two infield hits and an intentional walk to Willie Mays when Peterson came to bat.

He laced a single to left and when the ball bounced past Alou and rolled to the fence, all four runners scored.

That gave Bob Bolin a comfortable margin and the Giants' right-hander made it stand up. He allowed only one single over the final seven innings and finished with a three-hitter for for his fourth victory in seven decisions.

The victory was the fifth straight for the National League-leading Giants, who still hold a 2 1/2-game margin over surging Los Angeles. The Dodgers won their ninth game in the last 10 by shutting out St. Louis for the second straight night, 2-0.

Houston tagged reliever Jack Baldschun for nine hits and scored eight runs in the 12th inning to beat Cincinnati 11-4. Philadelphia edged Chicago 5-4 and Pittsburgh blanked New York 5-0.

In the American League, Washington battered Boston 12-2, New York downed Chicago 5-3, Detroit nipped Minnesota 7-6, and Baltimore defeated California 9-6 in 10 innings.

Houston broke loose with eight straight singles before Baldschun broke the string by hitting a batter. When the Astros were through, they had eight runs and the Reds were headed for their sixth straight loss.

Jim Gentile, Dave Nicholson and Jim Wynn drove in two runs apiece in the big inning. Nicholson had belted a two-run homer earlier but Cincinnati rallied for two runs, tying the score in the ninth.

Rich Allen's hot bat continued to pace the Phillies. Allen smashed a 430-foot inside-the-park homer as Philadelphia won its fourth straight and seventh in the last nine.

Rookie catcher Randy Hundley hammered a two-run shot for the Cubs.

Vern Law pitched a three-hitter and cracked a home run as the Pirates blanked the Mets. It was Law's fourth straight shut-out over two seasons against New York and his first victory since opening day.

Donn Clendenon and Willie Stargell also homered for Pittsburgh.

SAVE 'EM WITH SALT

A pinch of salt may not catch fish, but it certainly will preserve them.

According to the fishing experts at Mercury outboards, salt can be a substitute for ice to either keep fish fresh or preserve them over a long period without refrigeration.

When ice is not available, clean and bleed fish right after they have been caught. Rub them with a mixture of a tablespoon of pepper per cup of table salt. Keep the fish cool in a box or basket of leaves around which is wrapped moist burlap or newspaper.

When the fish arrive in the kitchen, the salt mixture is rinsed off and they are prepared for the table in the same manner as if they came directly from the water.

To preserve fish for a future use, the process is more complicated. After cleaning, wash them is a salt brine, then roll them in salt. Next, cover the bottom of a tub with salt and put in the fish.

As each row of fish is placed in the tub, add another layer of salt, allowing about one pound per four pounds of fish. Cover the container and weight it down so that fish stay below the level of brine as it forms. Fish should be cured from two to seven days, depending on individual size.

Remove fish, scrub in clear water and place them of wire racks under shade until dry. Then, restack with fresh salt and weight down.

A lot of trouble? Perhaps. But these fish will make a tasty dinner a long time after the season ends--and without a deep freeze.

Yancey Leads Memphis Open Golfers

MEMPHIS, Tenn. AP -- Perhaps Bert Yancey should have saved that remarkable round for another day.

The 27-year-old pro fired a seven-under-par 63 in the first round of the $100,000 Memphis Open Golf Tournament Thursday. That matched the Colonial Country Club course record and pushed him into a three-stroke lead.

But Yancey will be fighting history -- as well as the tough field of challengers -- the rest of the way.

For in the eight previous Memphis Opens, no first-round leader has wound up champion.

Some of the better known pros, including defending champion Jack Nicklaus, are at least seven strokes back. Nicklaus had a 72, Gary Player and Gay Brewer had 70s, Ben Hogan 71, and Julius Boros, Johnny Pott, Tommy Bolt and Joe Campbell 72s.

Yancey's closest pursuers heading into today's second round were left-hander Bob Charles, Dale Douglass, Gene Littler and Wright Garrett at 66. Next at 67 were Homero Blancas, Bob Ginsberg, Bruce Devlin, Jack Rule, Bob Goalby and Dick Litz.

Bert Yancey attributed most of his success to his putting, but all of his game was solid yesterday in a round of 63 that gave him the lead on the first day of the Memphis Open golf tournament.

The blond Philadelphian discovered the putting touch early and he used only 28 putts for the day. "I knew at the third hole I was putting well and I could have had a 62 as easily as a 63, I thought I had it on No. 9 (his 18th hole)."

Yancey's 63 tied the Colonial Country Club competitive course record and his birdie putt for a 62 on the final hole slid only inches off the mark. He shot his first nine (Colonial's back nine) in four-under-par 32 and finished with a three-under-par 31.

Thirty members of the 144-man field broke par in the opening round of the $100,000 tournament. Thirteen more were at par 70.

Bob Charles, the New Zealand lefthander, put a 66 on the board and led for four hours. Three others -- Dale Douglass, Gene Littler, and Wright Garrett -- later joined Charles at four under par. A half dozen were at 67, four were at 68, and 15 were at 69.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus, stricken by a triple bogie five holes out, finished at 72. Don January, three under and a threat at one point, carded a triple bogie and had a 71. The triple bogies were brought on by out-of-bounds shots, Nicklaus' on the 14th hole and January's on the seventh.

Rod Funseth set a fast pace early in the day, going 11 holes in five under par, but a double bogie and two bogies gave him a 69. Mason Rudolph of Clarksville, Tenn., shot his first nine holes in three-under par, but bogied 10,11,13 and 14, finishing the back nine with a 40 for a 71 total.

Cary Middlecoff of Memphis shot even par.

Many in the record first-day gallery of 10,283 fell in behind the threesome of Littler, Ben Hogan and Bert Weaver. Littler had won the Wednesday pro-am with a 63 and shot that and three strokes more yesterday. Hogan started well (33) but ended with a 38 for 71. Weaver shot 72.

For a time Yancey had competition from the other members of his threesome. Don Massengale went through 14 holes three under par, but bogied six, seven and nine for a 70. Jim Ferree was one under through 14 but finished at 71.

"Many times the very fact you are playing well breaks your concentration," Yancey said, "But I managed to ward off that problem."

Cards Held To 7-Hits, Lose 2-0

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Those lowly A's continued their uprising against the American League leading Indians Thursday night, battering Cleveland for 14 hits and an 11-4 victory that lifted them into ninth place.

Ralph Terry received credit for the victory, his first against three losses, but needed help from Low Krausse over the last three innings. Terry yielded 7 hits and one run and Krausse was charged with three hits and three runs.

Campy Campaneris, who had been hospitalized since Wednesday night with a muscle spasm in his back, returned to the line-up to pace the attack with two singles, a double, triple and two stolen bases.

In St. Louis pitchers Don Sutton and Ron Perranoski combined efforts to set the Cardinals down on 7-hits as the Dodgers posted a 2-0 shut-out.

West Parker singled home the Dodgers first run in the fifth and Al Ferrara drove in the second in the seventh on a punch-hit single. Nelson Briles was the Card loser.

Curt Flood had three hits for St. Louis and Tim McCarver got two. The Cards left eight men on base and the Dodgers 10.

Los Angeles now has won nine of its last 10 games.

The A's pummeled four Cleveland pitchers. Starter Gary Bell was the victim of record, suffering his second loss against four victories.

Mike Hershberger got three hits and drove in three runs and Dick Green and Ken Harrelson had two hits apiece and each drove in two runs.

Kansas City's biggst inning was the seventh when the A's sent five runs across the plate. A principal victim of the inning was Dick, The Monster, Radatz, the 260-pound relief artist acquired by the Indians only a few hours earlier from Boston.

Radatz led off by walking Kraussee, Campaneris doubled, and then followed two more hits and three bases on balls and the big righthander went to the showers.

Tonight the A's open in Baltimore with Jim Hunter scheduled to start against Jim Palmer of the Orioles.

St. Louis moves to Atlanta where Bob Gibson will be called on in hopes of returning the Cards to the victory column against Hank Fischer and the Braves.

There has been a steady decline in the number of executions in the United States in the last 35 years, despite a tremendous population explosion. The annual average has dropped in the northeastern United States from 31 to 7, from 21 to 3 in the north central states, in the southern states from 84 to 36 and from 19 to 11 in the western states. In Europe, in countries outside the Iron Curtain, capital punishment is rapidly being abolished.

It's not what men eat, but what they digest, that makes them strong; not what we gain, but what we save, that makes us rich; not what we read, but what we absorb, that makes us learned; not what we preach, but what we practice, that makes us loveable. -- Francis Bacon

SAVE 'EM WITH SALT

A pinch of salt may not catch fish, but it certainly will preserve them.

According to the fishing experts at Mercury outboards, salt can be a substitute for ice to either keep fish fresh or preserve them over a long period without refrigeration.

When ice is not available, clean and bleed fish right after they have been caught. Rub them with a mixture of a tablespoon of pepper per cup of table salt. Keep the fish cool in a box or basket of leaves around which is wrapped moist burlap or newspaper.

When the fish arrive in the kitchen, the salt mixture is rinsed off and they are prepared for the table in the same manner as if they came directly from the water.

To preserve fish for a future use, the process is more complicated. After cleaning, wash them is a salt brine, then roll them in salt. Next, cover the bottom of a tub with salt and put in the fish.

As each row of fish is placed in the tub, add another layer of salt, allowing about one pound per four pounds of fish. Cover the container and weight it down so that fish stay below the level of brine as it forms. Fish should be cured from two to seven days, depending on individual size.

Remove fish, scrub in clear water and place them of wire racks under shade until dry. Then, restack with fresh salt and weight down.

A lot of trouble? Perhaps. But these fish will make a tasty dinner a long time after the season ends--and without a deep freeze.

Braves Believe In Southern Hospitality

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Sure Atlanta belives in Southern hospitality.

But giving up four runs on a single. . . .!

That's what happened to Bobby Bragan's charitable Braves Thursday night when San Francisco handed Atlanta its sixth straight setback, 5-0.

Outfielder Felipe Alou was the goat on Cap Peterson's sixth inning single that broke open a 1-0 game. The bases were loaded on two infield hits and an intentional walk to Willie Mays when Peterson came to bat.

He laced a single to left and when the ball bounced past Alou and rolled to the fence, all four runners scored.

That gave Bob Bolin a comfortable margin and the Giants' right-hander made it stand up. He allowed only one single over the final seven innings and finished with a three-hitter for for his fourth victory in seven decisions.

The victory was the fifth straight for the National League-leading Giants, who still hold a 2 1/2-game margin over surging Los Angeles. The Dodgers won their ninth game in the last 10 by shutting out St. Louis for the second straight night, 2-0.

Houston tagged reliever Jack Baldschun for nine hits and scored eight runs in the 12th inning to beat Cincinnati 11-4. Philadelphia edged Chicago 5-4 and Pittsburgh blanked New York 5-0.

In the American League, Washington battered Boston 12-2, New York downed Chicago 5-3, Detroit nipped Minnesota 7-6, and Baltimore defeated California 9-6 in 10 innings.

Houston broke loose with eight straight singles before Baldschun broke the string by hitting a batter. When the Astros were through, they had eight runs and the Reds were headed for their sixth straight loss.

Jim Gentile, Dave Nicholson and Jim Wynn drove in two runs apiece in the big inning. Nicholson had belted a two-run homer earlier but Cincinnati rallied for two runs, tying the score in the ninth.

Rich Allen's hot bat continued to pace the Phillies. Allen smashed a 430-foot inside-the-park homer as Philadelphia won its fourth straight and seventh in the last nine.

Rookie catcher Randy Hundley hammered a two-run shot for the Cubs.

Vern Law pitched a three-hitter and cracked a home run as the Pirates blanked the Mets. It was Law's fourth straight shut-out over two seasons against New York and his first victory since opening day.

Donn Clendenon and Willie Stargell also homered for Pittsburgh.

Authentic Vietnamese Village in Kansas

By BOB HONEYMAN
The Junction City Union
For The Associated Press

FT. RILEY, Kan. (AP)—An authentic Vietnamese village, nestled in a wooded area of this sprawling military reservation, is being used to teach jungle warfare to soldiers of the 9th Infantry Division undergoing basic training at Ft. Riley.

Located near the Republican River, the village contains 18 thatched huts, a market square, booby traps and other pitfalls, three haystacks for concealing men or equipment, three sniper or observation positions hidden in trees, a sampan dock and boat house.

The entire complex is connected by a maze of underground tunnels, constructed by burying 55-gallon drums without tops or bottoms. An entrance is provided to the village by a 100-yard tunnel on the river.

Capt. Floyd McAfee, Ft. Riley range officer who spent 18 months in Viet Nam, is in charge of the project. Use of the village began this week.

Basic trainees will receive hours of instruction in the village during their eighth week of training and additional instruction during advanced individual training.

Some 900 trainees took a look Wednesday and saw how a village could appear empty yet be full of hiding Viet Cong.

"Never walk past a haystack without putting your bayonet through it," warned Sgt. Manuel Jordan. "Because about the time you have your back to it, out pop six Viet Cong and then you have trouble, real trouble."

The trainees saw bear traps the Viet Cong began using after U. S. troops switched from the leather boots to jungle boots with protective metal in the soles, but only canvass covering the ankle.

They saw the step whip, a stick full of spikes laid on a trail so the pressure of a man's foot on one end would cause it to flip into hs face and body.

Capt. McAfee ripped out a false wall in one of the huts, exposing four hiding "Viet Cong."

The key to survival here is to be alert," McAfee said. "Suspect everything. The Viet Cong can apply a booby trap for any situation."

McAfee said actual Vietnamese villages are grouped along a river which is the only water supply for the inhabitants. "They don't know piped-in water as we know it," he said. "It's all carried from the river by hand."

The thatched huts include one large dwelling for the village chief. Viet Cong weapons, maps and other items of interest will be displayed in the market square. There also is a combination school house and cafe, apartment houses and other facilities. Troops dressed as Vietnamese will add authenticity to the training.

The Ft. Riley trainees have to stoop when they enter the dwellings, which are designed for people who average less than 5-foot-2 in height.

McAfee said a similar village using U.S. standards would contain about 100 inhabitants. In Viet Nam it would contain 500 to 1,000 persons.

"Many Vietnamese would like to have these houses," McAfee said.

Basic trainees will receive five hours of jungle training consisting of an hour orientation on Viet Nam, two hours of classroom instruction in such jungle problems as heat, insect and animal bites, heavy foliage, sanitation, psychological aspects of jungle operations and tactical considerations in raids, ambushes, security, search techniques and techniques of the enemy.

The remaining two hours will be a demonstration and practical exercise in objects of village seizure and search, interrogation procedures, certain psychological warfare aspects of population control, and detection and avoidance of booby traps and mines.

The village also will be used in advanced individual training, basic and advanced unit training and operational readiness training.

It will accommodate a battalion (900 men) size unit for training and can be utilized as a brigade (3600 men) headquarters for larger exercises.

Chinese Mayor Ousted

TOKYO AP -- Peng Chen, mayor of Peking and one of the Chinese Communist party's top members, was apparently stripped of his party post today as part of the current widespread purge of dissident elements.

Without mentioning the mayor's name, Peking radio in a Chinese-language broadcast announced the appointment of Li Hsueh - feng as first secretary of the party's Peking central committee. This was the post Peng Chen held before some of his close associates were accused of "antiparty, anti-socialist" activities.

Peng Chen has not been reported seen in public for more than two months, and there had been rumors that he was marked for the purge.

The purge apparently has entered a new phase, with the party leadership intensifying its crackdown and admitting the opposition is "still very powerful." Editorials in the official Peking People's Daily and other published statements this week show that the cleanup is not having smooth sailing.

Peng Chen, now 67, reportedly ranked ninth among Red China's leaders and once was regarded as a possible successor to Mae Tze-tung. He has not been openly accused, but there have been hints that he was involved with three men charged with wanting "to overthrow the leadership of the Chinese Communist party."

These three, whom Peking repeatedly has accused of being traitors, are Wu Han, the vice mayor of Peking; Liao Mo-sha, a member of the Peking party central committee, and Teng To, former editor of the Peking People's Daily

The campaign against dissidents started last November as a crackdown on intellectuals. It has broadened, with Peking's official publications calling it a life and death struggle. They also note that the Hungarian uprising almost 10 years ago started with an intellectual revolt.

The People's Daily acknowledged Wednesday that the campaign was of purge proportions, saying it had swept away "a horde of monsters' entrenched in ideological and cultural positions.

Another People's Daily editorial Thursday struck a note of concern and urgency and admitted that "bourgeois ideology is still very powerful and exerts an immense influence in our country."

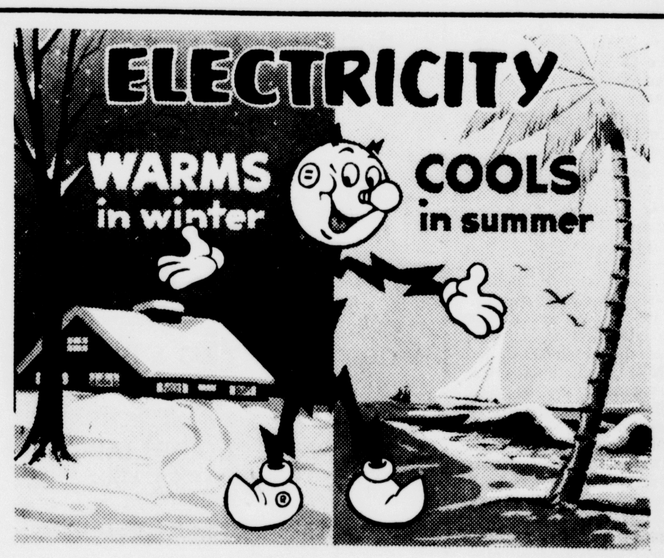

It urged Chinese Communists to "rally under the great banner of Mao Tze-tung's thought and wage resolute and relentless struggles against the antiparty and antisocialist bourgeois representatives."

The editorial said that victory in the struggle could not be taken for granted.

Authentic Vietnamese Village in Kansas

By BOB HONEYMAN
The Junction City Union
For The Associated Press

FT. RILEY, Kan. (AP)—An authentic Vietnamese village, nestled in a wooded area of this sprawling military reservation, is being used to teach jungle warfare to soldiers of the 9th Infantry Division undergoing basic training at Ft. Riley.

Located near the Republican River, the village contains 18 thatched huts, a market square, booby traps and other pitfalls, three haystacks for concealing men or equipment, three sniper or observation positions hidden in trees, a sampan dock and boat house.

The entire complex is connected by a maze of underground tunnels, constructed by burying 55-gallon drums without tops or bottoms. An entrance is provided to the village by a 100-yard tunnel on the river.

Capt. Floyd McAfee, Ft. Riley range officer who spent 18 months in Viet Nam, is in charge of the project. Use of the village began this week.

Basic trainees will receive hours of instruction in the village during their eighth week of training and additional instruction during advanced individual training.

Some 900 trainees took a look Wednesday and saw how a village could appear empty yet be full of hiding Viet Cong.

"Never walk past a haystack without putting your bayonet through it," warned Sgt. Manuel Jordan. "Because about the time you have your back to it, out pop six Viet Cong and then you have trouble, real trouble."

The trainees saw bear traps the Viet Cong began using after U. S. troops switched from the leather boots to jungle boots with protective metal in the soles, but only canvass covering the ankle.

They saw the step whip, a stick full of spikes laid on a trail so the pressure of a man's foot on one end would cause it to flip into hs face and body.

Capt. McAfee ripped out a false wall in one of the huts, exposing four hiding "Viet Cong."

The key to survival here is to be alert," McAfee said. "Suspect everything. The Viet Cong can apply a booby trap for any situation."

McAfee said actual Vietnamese villages are grouped along a river which is the only water supply for the inhabitants. "They don't know piped-in water as we know it," he said. "It's all carried from the river by hand."

The thatched huts include one large dwelling for the village chief. Viet Cong weapons, maps and other items of interest will be displayed in the market square. There also is a combination school house and cafe, apartment houses and other facilities. Troops dressed as Vietnamese will add authenticity to the training.

The Ft. Riley trainees have to stoop when they enter the dwellings, which are designed for people who average less than 5-foot-2 in height.

McAfee said a similar village using U.S. standards would contain about 100 inhabitants. In Viet Nam it would contain 500 to 1,000 persons.

"Many Vietnamese would like to have these houses," McAfee said.

Basic trainees will receive five hours of jungle training consisting of an hour orientation on Viet Nam, two hours of classroom instruction in such jungle problems as heat, insect and animal bites, heavy foliage, sanitation, psychological aspects of jungle operations and tactical considerations in raids, ambushes, security, search techniques and techniques of the enemy.

The remaining two hours will be a demonstration and practical exercise in objects of village seizure and search, interrogation procedures, certain psychological warfare aspects of population control, and detection and avoidance of booby traps and mines.

The village also will be used in advanced individual training, basic and advanced unit training and operational readiness training.

It will accommodate a battalion (900 men) size unit for training and can be utilized as a brigade (3600 men) headquarters for larger exercises.

Chinese Mayor Ousted

TOKYO AP -- Peng Chen, mayor of Peking and one of the Chinese Communist party's top members, was apparently stripped of his party post today as part of the current widespread purge of dissident elements.

Without mentioning the mayor's name, Peking radio in a Chinese-language broadcast announced the appointment of Li Hsueh - feng as first secretary of the party's Peking central committee. This was the post Peng Chen held before some of his close associates were accused of "antiparty, anti-socialist" activities.

Peng Chen has not been reported seen in public for more than two months, and there had been rumors that he was marked for the purge.

The purge apparently has entered a new phase, with the party leadership intensifying its crackdown and admitting the opposition is "still very powerful." Editorials in the official Peking People's Daily and other published statements this week show that the cleanup is not having smooth sailing.

Peng Chen, now 67, reportedly ranked ninth among Red China's leaders and once was regarded as a possible successor to Mao Tze-tung. He has not been openly accused, but there have been hints that he was involved with three men charged with wanting "to overthrow the leadership of the Chinese Communist party."

These three, whom Peking repeatedly has accused of being traitors, are Wu Han, the vice mayor of Peking; Liao Mo-sha, a member of the Peking party central committee, and Teng To, former editor of the Peking People's Daily

The campaign against dissidents started last November as a crackdown on intellectuals. It has broadened, with Peking's official publications calling it a life and death struggle. They also note that the Hungarian uprising almost 10 years ago started with an intellectual revolt.

The People's Daily acknowledged Wednesday that the campaign was of purge proportions, saying it had swept away "a horde of monsters' entrenched in ideological and cultural positions.

Another People's Daily editorial Thursday struck a note of concern and urgency and admitted that "bourgeois ideology is still very powerful and exerts an immense influence in our country."

It urged Chinese Communists to "rally under the great banner of Mao Tze-tung's thought and wage resolute and relentless struggles against the antiparty and antisocialist bourgeois representatives."

The editorial said that victory in the struggle could not be taken for granted.

ARTICLE #13

The rain continues to fall. It bangs against the tents and drips into puddles on the ground. It blows in sheets across the airfield, and drums into the trees. The steady rhythmn of the rain is punctuated now and then with great jagged streaks of lightening and sharp reports of thunder, snapping shrilly at first, then rolling through the valleys, picking up the resonance of the hollows, and cascading like a pounding surf out of the hills, with a deep throated roar.

An oxcart creaks slowly down a road, it's driver sitting cross-legged on the high-board, oblivious to the rain.

The aircraft sulk dejectedly on the ground, held down by the rain, their graceful forms mirrored by the water around them.

Charlie is taking advantage of the monsoon season, and is operating through the surrounding woods more freely, than when the ships are flying. This is being counter-acted somewhat, by increased use of tracks and armor. A couple of ARVN tracks are positioned just across the road from our area, and they are firing twin fifty calibres into the wood line. The guns roar and buck, and the tracer rounds glow brilliantly, as they flash through the rain. The spent casings pour out of the breaches on each side of the track. The Viet - Namese children scramble to pick them up, not as souvenirs, but for the cash value they can realize from them.

There are many children in Viet Nam. They will forever be my most vivid memory of this country. When it rains, they take their clothes off, and stand naked, uninhibited, and unembarrassed boy or girl. Sometimes they huddle together in groups of two or three under a piece or canvas, or beneath a sheet of tin, seeking some shelter. They don't have the shocked look of terror that make prize winning war photographs, because they have never known anything else with which to compare their current state. They have no childhood. They don't play like American children. This can be understood when you realize that American children play when they are subteen, at imitating adults. They play doctor, play teacher, truck driver, cowboy, then when they are in their teens, they enjoy sports. Here, it is a constant battle for survival from the time the child is old enough to walk and talk, until they are teen-agers, when they go to war. (It doesn't really seem to matter which side they fight on, it seems more a happening of chance, rather than conviction, as to whether they are VC, Loyalist, or one of the many other splinter groups.)

The children here never laugh, but then you seldom hear them cry either. Somehow, they seem merely to survive.

A Game Called "Comrade"

By ROBERT TUCKMAN

ABOARD CARRIER ENTERPRISE, Off North Viet Nam (AP) — The Russians and the U. S. 7th Fleet are following each other around in the seas off Viet Nam.

The game is called "Comrade" by the Americans. It's played this way:

A Soviet fishing trawler, equipped with an unusual amount of radar, shows up a few miles from the 90,000-ton, nuclear-powered Enterprise.

Its mission, apart from fishing, is snooping.

It wants to find out how many planes are aboard the carrier, how many are launched each day for attacks against North Viet Nam and any other information.

When the trawler shows up, the word goes round the Enterprise: "Comrade is shadowing us again."

A few miles behind, however, the fast nuclear-powered missile frigate Bainbridge is shadowing the Soviet shadower.

This keeps up for a few hours until Comrade drops out of sight, only to reappear a day or two later.

No guns are fired. No one makes any hostile moves. The ships don't even signal each other.

"They seem to want to be friendly," says Capt. James L. Holloway, skipper of the Enterprise.

"We haven't made any contact with them. They have every right to be here on the high seas.

"But I can't imagine what kind of information they're getting. We've got some of our planes below the flight deck which they can't see. The others we keep in motion day and night so they can't have much of an idea of what's going on.

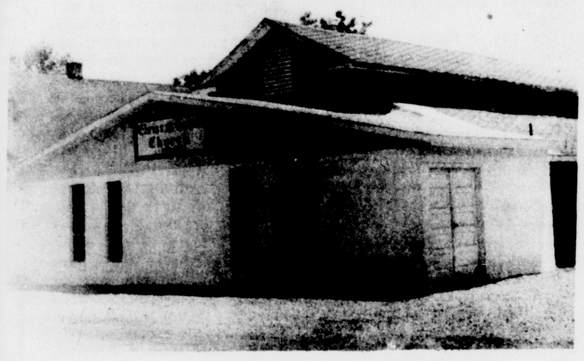

"They don't bother us and we don't bother them."

32 In A Series To Acquaint You With The Churches In This Area.

CHRIST GOSPEL CHURCH

Christ Gospel Church of Sikeston, Mo., was founded on Labor Day of 1961. The church was purchased from the church of God of Prophesy.

Bro. and Sis. Conner came in to Sikeston in 1961 and held a revival, from that revival a group of people got a vision of running on with Jesus and growing up in His stature.

People came from far and wide to receive deliverance from God. They go away rejoicing.

"We feel that pentecost is not a denomination or an organization, but an experience from God for everyone that has a 'born again' experience."

The church believes in the blood of Jesus, in the baptism of the Holy Ghost, in water baptism, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ and in healing. They are taught how to go on for Jesus.

We have approximately 150 on roll in Sunday School, and 10 teachers. The church has a missionary vision.

Since the church has been established we have had jail services at the Benton jail on Sunday afternoon. There have been many saved through the preaching at the jail services. Mr. Chester Swinney is in charge of the jail services. We have old folks home every Sunday afternoon.

There have been approximately 2,000 that have received the baptism of the Holy Ghost since the birth of the church, and there have been around 1,000 that have been baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

EVANGELIST AND MRS. LEONARD CONNOR

"We believe that without a vision people perish."

Bro. and Sis. Conner pastored the church the first 10 months, then Bro. and Sis. Beatty from Louisville, Ky., pastored for a year. Bro. and Sis. All Borsen from Wisconsin came in for a season, then Bro. and Sis. Winters came in to pastor from Louisville, Ky. In September Bro. and Sis. Connor returned. While Bro. Conner is on the Evangelistic field, Sis. Conner pastors the church. Many of the congregation are from out of town.

Two years ago the church purchased a nine room house beside the church which is the parsonage. Since September we have remodeled the church completely on the inside including the Sunday School rooms and some remodeling on the parsonage.

The Christ Gospel Church central office is in Jeffersonville, Ind. The Christ Gospel Churches are very missionary minded. They sent $122,000 to our missionaries in foreign countries last year. We have a large home for orphans outside Mexico City. In Mexico City and surrounding areas we have 32 churches. We have a roof top school in Hong Kong with 350 children, and a church there also. We have several churches in Africa and other countries, in addition to the churches in the United States, which are too numerous to number.

We invite everyone to attend. It doesn't matter about the color or creed. "Jesus came to save the lost and set the example for Christians to love everyone."

Viet Nam Montage

ARTICLE #13

The rain continues to fall. It bangs against the tents and drips into puddles on the ground. It blows in sheets across the airfield, and drums into the trees. The steady rhythmn of the rain is punctuated now and then with great jagged streaks of lightening and sharp reports of thunder, snapping shrilly at first, then rolling through the valleys, picking up the resonance of the hollows, and cascading like a pounding surf out of the hills, with a deep throated roar.

An oxcart creaks slowly down a road, it's driver sitting cross-legged on the high-board, oblivious to the rain.

The aircraft sulk dejectedly on the ground, held down by the rain, their graceful forms mirrored by the water around them.

Charlie is taking advantage of the monsoon season, and is operating through the surrounding woods more freely, than when the ships are flying. This is being counter-acted somewhat, by increased use of tracks and armor. A couple of ARVN tracks are positioned just across the road from our area, and they are firing twin fifty calibres into the wood line. The guns roar and buck, and the tracer rounds glow brilliantly, as they flash through the rain. The spent casings pour out of the breaches on each side of the track. The Viet - Namese children scramble to pick them up, not as souvenirs, but for the cash value they can realize from them.

There are many children in Viet Nam. They will forever be my most vivid memory of this country. When it rains, they take their clothes off, and stand naked, uninhibited, and unembarrassed boy or girl. Sometimes they huddle together in groups of two or three under a piece or canvas, or beneath a sheet of tin, seeking some shelter. They don't have the shocked look of terror that make prize winning war photographs, because they have never known anything else with which to compare their current state. They have no childhood. They don't play like American children. This can be understood when you realize that American children play when they are subteen, at imitating adults. They play doctor, play teacher, truck driver, cowboy, then when they are in their teens, they enjoy sports. Here, it is a constant battle for survival from the time the child is old enough to walk and talk, until they are teen-agers, when they go to war. (It doesn't really seem to matter which side they fight on, it seems more a happening of chance, rather than conviction, as to whether they are VC, Loyalist, or one of the many other splinter groups.)

The children here never laugh, but then you seldom hear them cry either. Somehow, they seem merely to survive.

A Game Called "Comrade"

By ROBERT TUCKMAN

ABOARD CARRIER ENTERPRISE, Off North Viet Nam (AP) — The Russians and the U. S. 7th Fleet are following each other around in the seas off Viet Nam.

The game is called "Comrade" by the Americans. It's played this way:

A Soviet fishing trawler, equipped with an unusual amount of radar, shows up a few miles from the 90,000-ton, nuclear-powered Enterprise.

Its mission, apart from fishing, is snooping.

It wants to find out how many planes are aboard the carrier, how many are launched each day for attacks against North Viet Nam and any other information.

When the trawler shows up, the word goes round the Enterprise: "Comrade is shadowing us again."

A few miles behind, however, the fast nuclear-powered missile frigate Bainbridge is shadowing the Soviet shadower.

This keeps up for a few hours until Comrade drops out of sight, only to reappear a day or two later.

No guns are fired. No one makes any hostile moves. The ships don't even signal each other.

"They seem to want to be friendly," says Capt. James L. Holloway, skipper of the Enterprise.

"We haven't made any contact with them. They have every right to be here on the high seas.

"But I can't imagine what kind of information they're getting. We've got some of our planes below the flight deck which they can't see. The others we keep in motion day and night so they can't have much of an idea of what's going on.

"They don't bother us and we don't bother them."

32 In A Series To Acquaint You With The Churches In This Area.

CHRIST GOSPEL CHURCH

EVANGELIST AND MRS. LEONARD CONNOR

Christ Gospel Church of Sikeston, Mo., was founded on Labor Day of 1961. The church was purchased from the church of God of Prophesy.

Bro. and Sis. Conner came in to Sikeston in 1961 and held a revival, from that revival a group of people got a vision of running on with Jesus and growing up in His stature.

People came from far and wide to receive deliverance from God. They go away rejoicing.

"We feel that pentecost is not a denomination or an organization, but an experience from God for everyone that has a 'born again' experience."

The church believes in the blood of Jesus, in the baptism of the Holy Ghost, in water baptism, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ and in healing. They are taught how to go on for Jesus.

We have approximately 150 on roll in Sunday School, and 10 teachers. The church has a missionary vision.

Since the church has been established we have had jail services at the Benton jail on Sunday afternoon. There have been many saved through the preaching at the jail services. Mr. Chester Swinney is in charge of the jail services. We have old folks home every Sunday afternoon.

There have been approximately 2,000 that have received the baptism of the Holy Ghost since the birth of the church, and there have been around 1,000 that have been baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

"We believe that without a vision people perish."

Bro. and Sis. Conner pastored the church the first 10 months, then Bro. and Sis. Beatty from Louisville, Ky., pastored for a year. Bro. and Sis. All Borsen from Wisconsin came in for a season, then Bro. and Sis. Winters came in to pastor from Louisville, Ky. In September Bro. and Sis. Connor returned. While Bro. Conner is on the Evangelistic field, Sis. Conner pastors the church. Many of the congregation are from out of town.

Two years ago the church purchased a nine room house beside the church which is the parsonage. Since September we have remodeled the church completely on the inside including the Sunday School rooms and some remodeling on the parsonage.

The Christ Gospel Church central office is in Jeffersonville, Ind. The Christ Gospel Churches are very missionary minded. They sent $122,000 to our missionaries in foreign countries last year. We have a large home for orphans outside Mexico City. In Mexico City and surrounding areas we have 32 churches. We have a roof top school in Hong Kong with 350 children, and a church there also. We have several churches in Africa and other countries, in addition to the churches in the United States, which are too numerous to number.

We invite everyone to attend. It doesn't matter about the color or creed. "Jesus came to save the lost and set the example for Christians to love everyone."

Contractor's Viewpoint On Government Construction Contract Specifications

New ASPR revisions, if contractors are not vigilant, could change the scope and meaning of their contracts, raise costs of doing business with federal government.

EDITOR'S NOTE - The April 27 issue of Construction News carried two interviews of considerable importance to all contractors and members of the construction industry involved primarily with federal (as well as some other) construction work. The following article broadens the base on which these two interviews were conducted -- namely the Armed Services Procurement Regulations, more commonly known as the ASPR.

In these two interviews, Don Giampaoli of the AGC's Washington staff and E. Manning Seltzer, General Counsel to the Chief of Engineers, U.S. Army, presented the contractor's views and the government's views, respectively, on a revised concept of equitable adjustments in contract administration. This revised concept may, in the near future, be incorporated in the ASPR. As proposed, it should be received favorably by the industry as a whole, but there are other current and proposed revisions of the ASPR which will not receive such favorable acceptance by the private segment of the industry.

Construction News asked Clarence Crumpecker, in his position as Chairman of the Specifications Task Unit of the AGC , to prepare an article concerning the ramifications of these other proposed changes in the ASPR. His article appears here.

Both Don Giampaoli and Manning Seltzer have had much wider experience in the field of contract specifications than I and both are experts in this field. Their discussions are very helpful and should be studied with care by any contractor performing work for the federal government.

It is my view, however, that the most serious development in the field of construction contracts in modern times grows out of the new Armed Services Procurement Regulations (ASPR).

These new regulations could, if we are not vigilant, change the scope, meaning and cost of our contracts; they could affect our relationships with our subcontractors; and they could change our methods of transacting business with our equipment dealers and our vendors of materials and supplies.

Most of us remember how two recent rulings by the Labor Department affected us. One of these changed our method of transacting business on rental-maintenance contracts with equipment dealers. The other, on revetment jobs, almost made subcontractors out of rock suppliers since they were made subject to all provisions of our contracts with the federal government by having the Davis-Bacon wage rates and regulations imposed on them. The first ruling is with us, but due largely to the personal efforts of Bruce Tucker* and the national AGC the second was rescinded.

About three years ago Defense Secretary McNamara appointed a committee to review, rewrite and combine into one volume all Armed Services Procurement Regulations -- both civil and military -- pertaining to procurement, supply and construction contracts. When completed, the volume will be a massive document containing some 1,500 to 2,000 pages of all the regulations for the acquisition of everything -- from socks and neckties to bombers and missiles and for the administration of the smallest construction contract to the billion-dollar construction contract in Viet Nam.

When my committee of the National AGC first learned of the background of the members of the ASPR Committee, we were dismayed. Most of them had considerable experience in supply and procurement contracts, but not one had any previous experience with either the preparation or administration of construction contracts.

TWO REQUESTS MADE

The AGC obtained an audience with the ASPR Committee and made two requests: (1), that all regulations concerning construction contracts, including general provisions, special provisions, and technical provisions be put in a separate section of the new ASPR; and (2), that the AGC be allowed to review all construction contract regulations, suggesting changes, deletions and/or additions before they were placed in their final form in the ASPR.

The reasoning behind the first request was that if all construction contract regulations were in a separate section there would be less likelihood that these regulations, which had heretofore applied only to supply and procurement contracts, would find their way into all construction contracts. This request was partially refused and the general provisions for all types of contracts remain in a single section.

A separate section, however, is to be devoted to the special and technical provisions of construction contracts.

In June of 1964 I was a member of a small committee of contractors who, along with Mr. Giampaoli of the national AGC, reviewed the new ASPR Construction Contract Regulations. We found that some of the new regulations followed the exact wording of the ones they were to replace and that in others the new wording did not change the meaning or the intent of the regulations. These were passed over without comment.

In other regulations, we requested the substitution of a single word as, for example, in the Payment Provision, which states in effect that when a construction contract is 50% complete and progress is satisfactory the contracting officer MAY make subsequent partial payment estimates without deducting retainage. We requested the word SHALL be substituted for MAY, our reasoning being that when a contract was 50% complete and the progress was satisfactory, the contracting officer should not have the authority to continue to withhold retainage for any other reason. But we lost this one.

INSPECTION PROVISION

Our earlier fears that regulations which had never been a part of construction contract documents would find their way into them unless all construction contract regulations were placed in a separate section of the ASPR were realized. The ASPR's Contractor's Inspection Provision, which has been a part of supply and procurement contracts but never a part of construction contracts, is now incorporated in our standard construction contracts. This provision states:

The Contractor shall (1) maintain an adequate inspection system and perform such inspections as will assure that the work performed under the contract conforms to contract requirements, and (2) maintain and make available to the Government adequate records of such inspections. ASPR 7-602.10 (a)

From its inception, this provision, which is now a part of all contracts, has caused the AGC more concern than any other provision in present government construction contracts. No one knows just what it means and there has been no clarification by the Office of the Chief of Engineers as to what the administration of it should be despite repeated requests by the AGC.

In some areas of work the Corps of Engineers has required only that the job superintendent keep a daily log of what work was performed each day and show that he had inspected the work. (The superintendent is supposed to keep the log either on his person or in his vehicle at all times so that the contracting officer or his representative may have access to it at any time.)

On the other hand, we have documentary evidence that a contracting officer wrote a contractor demanding that he (the contractor) hire a full time Superintendent of Inspection and supply him (the superintendent) with all the necessary technicians and equipment to adequately inspect the work. Voluminous daily reports were to be kept and copies submitted weekly to the contracting officer. Even though the job was well underway before this demand was made, the contracting officer further demanded that the daily log reports be made retroactive and prepared from the beginning of the job.

OMISSIONS PROVISION

There is yet another new provision in Corps of Engineers' contracts which come from the ASPR via the Navy's Bureau of Yards and Docks, which states:

Omissions from the drawings or specifications or the misdescription of details of work which are manifestly necessary to carry out the intent of the drawings and specifications, or which are customarily performed, shall not relieve the contractor from performing such omitted or misdescribed details of work, but they shall be performed as if fully and correctly set forth and described in the drawings and specifications.

This is one of the most unfair provisions that has ever been placed in a Corps of Engineers contract or any other contract for that matter. The Navy claims that it has used this provision since 1952, and that, is its administration of the regulation, the provision has applied only to MINOR omissions or deletions in contract documents. But is not what the regulation spells out; and it could be used for MAJOR omission and deletions in a job's plans and specifications.

This regulation places on the contractor the burden of finding errors and omissions on the plans and in the specifications before the job is awarded and places the contractor in the position of having to read the minds of the architects, engineer and designer in order to protect himself. Few contractors are so clairvoyant.

The Navy's claim that it uses this regulation only in minor matters will not bear close scrutiny because the Board of Contract Appeals has ruled against it on two occasions very recently in its interpretation of the regulation.

SUMMING UP

The national AGC has requested the ASPR Committee to remove both of the regulations mentioned above from the ASPR because it believes these two regulations add nothing of value to the finished product and that they are costly to administer.

The contractor's Inspection Regulation causes duplicity of inspection since the Armed Services have always inspected the work performed; the Omissions Regulation makes the contractor responsible for poorly drawn plans and specification which he has had no part in preparing.

I would like to caution all contractors performing work for the federal government to carefully read all specifications on each job BEFORE EACH LETTING. If you find any new regulations in these contract documents that have no value or particular application to the job, you should report them to your AGC chapter manager. Should he be unsuccessful in having these regulations withdrawn, he will then report to the national AGC for its presentation to the office of the Chief of Engineers.

If contractors performing work for the federal government remain vigilant and are prompt in reporting the appearance of new regulations in the contract documents we can keep the construction contract we now have in its presently relatively clear, concise and fair form. However, if we are not alert, the construction contract will change radically within the next few years as new ASPR regulations find their way into our contract documents.

Housing Corp Works Together

LILBOURN -- The Lilbourn Housing Corporation, located at South Lilbourn, will soon receive the fruits of their labor, after the completion of a community park and garden project.

The park site has been cleared, and the nearly 10 acre site has been planted with trees, shrubbery and flowers at the edges of the ground.

A shelter house is now under construction, and will house several picnic tables and a larger barbeque grill, and a concrete floor. The park will be made available to the children and grown-ups of the South Lilbourn project. Playground equipment has been ordered and will be placed on the grounds in the next few weeks.

The second project, adjoining the park site, is a large community garden. The garden plot, measuring more than an acre is now being planted in peas, tomatoes, green beans and cucumbers.

When the vegetables are harvested in late summer and fall, they will be made available to supplement the food supply of the older needy families living in the community, for their winter needs.

The program was made available to the community through the economic opportunity act, with funds for the completion of the two projects, as well as additional funds for labor done, both in the community and garden projects.

DEXTER -- The City of Dexter has filed a declaratory judgment suit against several persons who own property north and west of Dexter that is included in the present city limits extension plan.

Named in the suit are George Sisler, Chester Fralick, Lewis Rogers, Jr., Woodrow E. Gaines and Lee Rainey.

More Hope for Cure of Cancer

By ROBERT GOLDENSTEIN
AP Science Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Two findings that open a new approach toward the elusive goal of finding the cause and prevention of cancer were disclosed today by a medical research team from Columbia University.

The researchers presented the strongest tentative evidence yet that cancers may be started by viruses which then move on to repeat their destructive work in adjoining cells.

Dr. John K. Lattimer, co-chairman of the department of urology at Columbia University in New York, said that virus-like particles have been found for the first time in healthy looking cells lying adjacent to cancer cells in prostate glands. They were not found in the cancer cells.

He said his researchers also discovered that these cells, which appeared normal under ordinary-light microscopes, actually were growing at the "same tremendous rate" as cancer cells.

"The discovery of either condition was unusual, but when they appear in combination it becomes exciting," he said in an interview at the annual meeting of the American Urological Association.

Dr. Myron Tannenbaum, pathologist member of the research team which made the twin discoveries, described the findings and exhibited picture slides at the urologists' convention.

Lattimer, who heads the research project, said "the next step which we're working on now" is to attempt to isolate the virus-like particles. Under the electron microscope the particles are identical in appearance to the Lucke tumor virus which causes cancers in frog kidneys.

Draft Call for August

WASHINGTON AP -- The Defense Department announced today it has placed a draft call for 32,600 men in august.

This figure is considerably above the levels asked for the other summer months. The Pentagon asked the Selective Service to provide 15,000 men in June -- lowest of the year -- and 26,500 in July.

All inductees called in August will be assigned to the Army. The Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force sought no men.

Contractor's Viewpoint On Government Construction Contract Specifications

New ASPR revisions, if contractors are not vigilant, could change the scope and meaning of their contracts, raise costs of doing business with federal government.

EDITOR'S NOTE - The April 27 issue of Construction News carried two interviews of considerable importance to all contractors and members of the construction industry involved primarily with federal (as well as some other) construction work. The following article broadens the base on which these two interviews were conducted -- namely the Armed Services Procurement Regulations, more commonly known as the ASPR.

In these two interviews, Don Giampaoli of the AGC's Washington staff and E. Manning Seltzer, General Counsel to the Chief of Engineers, U.S. Army, presented the contractor's views and the government's views, respectively, on a revised concept of equitable adjustments in contract administration. This revised concept may, in the near future, be incorporated in the ASPR. As proposed, it should be received favorably by the industry as a whole, but there are other current and proposed revisions of the ASPR which will not receive such favorable acceptance by the private segment of the industry.

Construction News asked Clarence Crumpecker, in his position as Chairman of the Specifications Task Unit of the AGC , to prepare an article concerning the ramifications of these other proposed changes in the ASPR. His article appears here.

Both Don Giampaoli and Manning Seltzer have had much wider experience in the field of contract specifications than I and both are experts in this field. Their discussions are very helpful and should be studied with care by any contractor performing work for the federal government.

It is my view, however, that the most serious development in the field of construction contracts in modern times grows out of the new Armed Services Procurement Regulations (ASPR).

These new regulations could, if we are not vigilant, change the scope, meaning and cost of our contracts; they could affect our relationships with our subcontractors; and they could change our methods of transacting business with our equipment dealers and our vendors of materials and supplies.

Most of us remember how two recent rulings by the Labor Department affected us. One of these changed our method of transacting business on rental-maintenance contracts with equipment dealers. The other, on revetment jobs, almost made subcontractors out of rock suppliers since they were made subject to all provisions of our contracts with the federal government by having the Davis-Bacon wage rates and regulations imposed on them. The first ruling is with us, but due largely to the personal efforts of Bruce Tucker* and the national AGC the second was rescinded.

About three years ago Defense Secretary McNamara appointed a committee to review, rewrite and combine into one volume all Armed Services Procurement Regulations -- both civil and military -- pertaining to procurement, supply and construction contracts. The reasoning behind the first request was that if all construction contract regulations were in a separate section there would be less likelihood that these regulations, which had heretofore applied only to supply and procurement contracts, would find their way into all construction contracts. This request was partially refused and the general provisions for all types of contracts remain in a single section.

Sowers Brothers, With Excellent Records, To Join Family Newspaper

COLUMBIA, Mo. -- The Edward W. Sowers newspaper family of Rolla is scheduled to be well represented in the June 7 Commencement on the Columbia campus of the University of Missouri. Two sons of Edward (Eddie) W. Sowers, Rolla publisher and president of the Sowers Newspapers, Inc., and Mrs. Sowers, and the wife of one of the sons are candidates for degrees.

An added unusual aspect is that both sons are studying for their degrees in the School of Journalism, from which the father received his Bachelor of Journalism degree in 1928.

Stephen E. Sowers, the eldest son, who received an A. B. here in 1964, is a graduate student in the School and candidate for his Master of Arts degree with news writing and publishing his area of concentration. Thomas S. Sowers is a candidate for his Bachelor of Journalism degree in the field of advertising. Stephen's wife, in the College of Arts and Science, is a candidate for a Bachelor of Arts degree with a major in fine arts. She is the former Miss Sheryl Ann McCubbins of Cabool, Mo.

The sons are following in their father's footsteps even further than getting degrees at the University of Missouri and getting them in journalism; they are going into the publishing business with him. On graduation Stephen and Thomas will join their father and mother in making an active family foursome in the Sowers Newspapers, Inc., which publishes the Rolla Daily News and the Fort Gateway Guide at Waynesville.

Presently Mr. Sowers is president and Mrs. Sowers is secretary-treasurer of the Sowers Newspapers, Inc., and Mr. Sowers is publisher of the papers. After graduation Stephen is to be an associate publisher and managing editor of the newspapers, and Thomas is to be an associate publisher and advertising manager. Recently the Sowers publishing activities were incorporated to include their three sons, Stephen, Thomas and James, in the business as vice-president.

The youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Sowers, James, is planning to enter engineering, and is a sophomore at the University of Missouri at Rolla, but is a member of the corporation.

Stephen and Thomas will start their newspaper careers with a background of training even more extensive than graduation from the School of Journalism with its experience on a daily newspaper of general circulation, the Columbia Missourian. As their father puts it, "both Steve and Tom took thorough pre-college courses in the 'Rolla Daily News School of Journalsim.'"

The two journalism-minded sons have made a promising record in the University. Both are members of Kappa Tau Alpha, national honorary fraternity honoring scholarship in journalism, into which Stephen was initiated during recent Journalism Week, and of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalism fraternity. In addition, Thomas was recently initiated into Omicron Delta Kappa, national leadership honor society for men.

At the spring meeting of the Inland Press Association in Chicago Stephen presented a paper from his master's thesis, which is a cost study of five Missouri dailies comparing offset and tabular operations before some 500 publishers. Later he presented the same paper before the Ozark Press Association meeting in Springfield, Mo.

Edward W. Sowers, who is a past president (1962-63) of the University of Missouri Alumni Association, in commenting on his sons both going into newspaper work and staying in Missouri, said he "notes not only with personal pride but state pride that a goodly number of journalism graduates are staying in Missouri, where I think they will improve the quality of the newspapers."

He was thinking of the publishing families such as the Blantons of Sikeston, Stapletons of Kennett, Dales of Carthage, Meusers of Monett, Sparks of Hannibal, Whites of Mexico, Briggs of Macon, Bradleys of St. Joseph, Scrutons of Sedalia, Bush of Neosho, Swains of Kirksville, Van Cleves of Moberly, Hains of Marshall, Watkins of Chillicothe, Johnsons of Fulton, Wolpers of Poplar Bluff, Naeters of Cape Girardeau, among the dailies, and many good weeklies like the Davis' of Houston, Roop of De-

Mr. Sowers, upon graduation from the School of Journalism, started his newspaper career on the Boonville, Mo., Advertiser, of which the late Walter Williams, first Dean of the School of Journalism and later President of the University, had at one time been publisher. He also edited the Boonville Daily News and the Excelsior Springs, Mo., Daily Standard before he bought the Rolla New Era in 1942.

Sowers Brothers, With Excellent Records, To Join Family Newspaper

COLUMBIA, Mo. -- The Edward W. Sowers newspaper family of Rolla is scheduled to be well represented in the June 7 Commencement on the Columbia campus of the University of Missouri. Two sons of Edward (Eddie) W. Sowers, Rolla publisher and president of the Sowers Newspapers, Inc., and Mrs. Sowers, and the wife of one of the sons are candidates for degrees.

An added unusual aspect is that both sons are studying for their degrees in the School of Journalism, from which the father received his Bachelor of Journalism degree in 1928.

Stephen E. Sowers, the eldest son, who received an A. B. here in 1964, is a graduate student in the School and candidate for his Master of Arts degree with news writing and publishing his area of concentration. Thomas S. Sowers is a candidate for his Bachelor of Journalism degree in the field of advertising. Stephen's wife, in the College of Arts and Science, is a candidate for a Bachelor of Arts degree with a major in fine arts. She is the former Miss Sheryl Ann McCubbins of Cabool, Mo.

The sons are following in their father's footsteps even further than getting degrees at the University of Missouri and getting them in journalism; they are going into the publishing business with him. On graduation Stephen and Thomas will join their father and mother in making an active family foursome in the Sowers Newspapers, Inc., which publishes the Rolla Daily News and the Fort Gateway Guide at Waynesville.

Youngsters Steal Show

By ROBERT HOLTON

NEW YORK AP -- Four youngsters, their hands so dirty they wouldn't shake hands with a prince, stole the show Wednesday night from a gem-adorned group of society's most famous women.

Cheryl, Debby and Joseph Caponetta and Kevin Meade turned the trick as some 650 socialities, diplomats, business leaders and a royal prince trooped aboard a Holland-America luxury liner in the name of charity.

They didn't go aboard the liner but mingled with the crowd at the pier as the vessel was about to sail.

"My hands were pretty dirty," said Kevin, 6. "And I just didn't want to have him see them so I held them behind my back when we met him."

The him Kevin referred to was Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands, royal host of the fifth annual "Captain's Gala" sponsored by the New York City chapter of the American Cancer Society as a fund-raising program.

"Why don't you come aboard with us and have dinner?" the prince asked the four youngsters, ranging in age from six to 10.

"Oh no," an official said. "We don't even know who they are. We might get them in trouble by taking them away."

The liner carried the guests, who paid $150 each, to a point a few miles outside the harbor where it circled for four hours as its passengers ate a seven-course dinner and then gambled in a casino set up in one of the ship's main lounges.

Chapter officials estimated the night's entertainment reaped some $150,000 for use in research and other work on cancer.

The children had been brought to the pier by the father of three of them -- Frank Caponetta, a sporting goods store operator who had delivered some items to be used for prizes at the gambling table.

I was sitting alone in the Officer's Club at Fort Ord while my escort made an important telephone call. On the stool next to mine sat a young major. After staring at my low-cut evening gown for several embarrassing minutes, he finally spoke.

"Would you be interested," he asked in an assured voice, "in contributing to the delinquency of a major?"

Youngsters Steal Show

By ROBERT HOLTON

NEW YORK AP -- Four youngsters, their hands so dirty they wouldn't shake hands with a prince, stole the show Wednesday night from a gem-adorned group of society's most famous women.

Cheryl, Debby and Joseph Caponetta and Kevin Meade turned the trick as some 650 socialities, diplomats, business leaders and a royal prince trooped aboard a Holland-America luxury liner in the name of charity.

They didn't go aboard the liner but mingled with the crowd at the pier as the vessel was about to sail.

"My hands were pretty dirty," said Kevin, 6. "And I just didn't want to have him see them so I held them behind my back when we met him."

The him Kevin referred to was Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands, royal host of the fifth annual "Captain's Gala" sponsored by the New York City chapter of the American Cancer Society as a fund-raising program.

"Why don't you come aboard with us and have dinner?" the prince asked the four youngsters, ranging in age from six to 10.

"Oh no," an official said. "We don't even know who they are. We might get them in trouble by taking them away."

The liner carried the guests, who paid $150 each, to a point a few miles outside the harbor where it circled for four hours as its passengers ate a seven-course dinner and then gambled in a casino set up in one of the ship's main lounges.

Chapter officials estimated the night's entertainment reaped some $150,000 for use in research and other work on cancer.

The children had been brought to the pier by the father of three of them -- Frank Caponetta, a sporting goods store operator who had delivered some items to be used for prizes at the gambling table.

I was sitting alone in the Officer's Club at Fort Ord while my escort made an important telephone call. On the stool next to mine sat a young major. After staring at my low-cut evening gown for several embarrassing minutes, he finally spoke.

"Would you be interested," he asked in an assured voice, "in contributing to the delinquency of a major?"

THE PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

FRIDAY, JUNE 3, 1966
Then He (Jesus) said to them: "Go forth to every part of the world, and proclaim the Good News to the whole creation." (Mark 16:15 NEB)

PRAYER: May the Holy Spirit, O God, direct us in all our ways, and lead us into all truth. Thus fulfill in us also Christ's promise to His first disciples. In His name we pray. Amen.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mr. Charles Blanton, Jr.
Sikeston, Missouri
Dear Mr. Blanton,

The Sikeston Art League's exhibit owes a great deal of its success to the fine publicity the Standard was able to give us. We were, with your help, able to reach first the artist, to inform him of the coming show and then to let the public know when and where. The artist responded and we had more entries than in other years. The viewers turned out in force and in spite of conflicting events and the holiday weekend, we saw record crowds at the exhibit.

Thank you for adding so greatly to the success of the exhibit and for making my job of publicity easy.

Sincerely,
Barbara Smith

Sikeston, Mo.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I think it's mighty noble of you to want to buck up the women over 40 when they write and say they are pregnant (and ready to kill themselves) but have you ever stopped to think about how life looks to children who are born to women past 40? I know because I am one.

My father died before I graduated from high school -- of old age, of course. I never knew a grandparent. My nieces and nephews are just about my age. (My nephew went to school with me and it was pretty embarrassing to have that little runt call me auntie).

Please quit telling those old crows how great the "late dividend" can be. -- ONE MYSELF.

Dear One: Those women don't ask whether or not they should have late babies. They are ALREADY pregnant! I try to make them feel good about it.

As for you -- wouldn't you rather have been born late than never?

Dear Ann Landers: I was adopted by a wonderful family when I was an infant. Mom and dad are the only parents I have ever known. They did not tell me I was adopted because I was a delicate child and they didn't want to add to my problem. A neighbor woman blurted it out one day and it had a terrible effect on me. Why, oh why, can't people keep their mouths shut?

Now I am going through the same thing again. We have three children and two are adopted. We have never told our adopted children about their history because we didn't want them to feel different from our blood child. Everything was going along fine until last week when we visited relatives in another state. My sister-in-law's children spilled the beans.

Now our adopted children are bitter and resentful. They say we tried to fool them and they are sullen and withdrawn.

Please, Ann Landers, tell people that it's up to the parents to tell or NOT to tell their children if they are adopted. Outsiders should shut up about it. --SALT LAKE MOTHER

Dear Mother: If you had grown up with the knowledge that you were adopted -- as you should have -- the neighbor's remark would have had no effect on you whatever. If your children had been told at an early age that they were chosen because they were very special and you wanted them very much, they would not feel betrayed now.

People talk - and they especially talk about other people. To expect the whole world to keep your secret was a foolish miscalculation. I have said this repeatedly in my column and I'll say it again. Adopted children should be told by their parents as soon as they learn to talk. This information, when offered by an outsider, can produce wounds that never heal.

Dear Ann: I'm 28 and engaged to marry a fine girl. Problem: I was divorced two years ago. No children. No alimony. No dirt. I want to tell my fiancee's parents BEFORE we marry. She says no. She feels they will take it better after we are married. What do you say? --R.R.

Dear R.R.: Tell them at once. And don't leave out any details for others to provide -- as they inevitably will if you give them the opportunity.

Awkward and self-conscious? Unsure of yourself? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key To Popularity," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

ARCHITECT'S drawing shows the planned appearance of the $1.8 million multi-purpose auditorium which will be constructed on the campus of the University of Missouri at Rolla to serve as an auditorium seating 6,400 and to double as an indoor athletic and physical education headquarters.

ROLLA, Mo., -- The Board of Curators at the University of Missouri at Rolla has authorized a $2 million expansion program to provide a multiple-purpose auditorium seating 6,400 and an adjacent football stadium having 4,000 permanent seats and press booth facilities. Chancellor Merl Baker said that advertisements for bids are expected to be published soon, although completion of the facilities may be a year or more away.

Funds for the facilities were provided by the 73rd General Assembly a year ago.

The multi-purpose building will provide a structure with a gross area of 90,000 square feet suitable for indoor athletic events, concerts, commencements, and even drama activities on a proposed 24 by 52-foot portable stage. The building will contain a basketball court 148 by 120 feet in size, constructed so that two practice courts can be utilized.

Marshall and Brown, Kansas City architectural and engineering firm, has prepared final plans for the structure that includes an auditorium-gymnasium with folding bleachers seating 2,400, folding chairs increasing capacity by 1,000, and a balcony seating for 3,000.

It will contain 10 offices, wrestling, weight, gymnastic, trainer and therapy rooms, locker rooms, three handball courts, a 42 by 75-foot swimming pool with a balcony seating 270, as well as basketball courts.

The multi-purpose auditorium will be located along Tenth Street and Bishop Avenue (U.S. 63), with the football stadium separated by parking areas that can serve both the stadium and the auditorium.

The ground floor of the auditorium will contain the locker, training and equipment rooms, showers, offices and facilities for gymnastics, handball and wrestling. The natatorium and gymnasium-auditorium, with concession stands, will be located on the first floor. The second floor will offer balcony seating for the gymnasium-auditorium as well as activiey space.

Beneath the stadium is planned equipment and storage facilities as well as team locker rooms. Atop the structure will be a two-story press box 50 feet long.

Cost estimates for the multi-purpose auditorium are approximately $1,826,000.

Specifications call for the ground floor to have two classrooms of 880 square feet; wrestling and weight rooms of 1,280 square feet; a gymnastics room of 1,620 square feet with a 22-foot ceiling; three handball courts with 22-foot ceilings, as well as locker rooms for athletics and physical education. Women's lockers, with shower and drying room areas and access to the swimming pool and playing floor, will be included on the main floor.

The POWER of FAITH
By WOODI ISHMAEL

The Rev. Michio Imai, a United Church of Christ pastor, has conceived and established a unique ministry in his country, Japan. After witnessing the deep personal grief of a family who lost a member, a truck driver, in a fatal crash, he took positive steps towards prevention of highway accidents.

Fatigue, loneliness, strain and lack of sleep are enemies of long distance truckers.

In Japan, long distance truckers with small firms have driving assignments for as much as four days and nights without real rest. With the financial help of churches in Holland, Germany and Australia, through the World Council of Churches, he was able to establish a truckers mission. At Kakogawa on the highway that runs between Tokyo and Shimonoseki, he has built what is now known as The Traffic Labor Welfare Center. It consists of a restaurant for 50 people, hot baths, beds for 25 drivers, and an official counseling room.

Mrs. Imai runs the restaurant, helped by three children. Much of Mr. Imai's time is spent talking to and counseling the men. He has the help of two full time staff members and six part time counselors.

THE PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

FRIDAY, JUNE 3, 1966
Then He (Jesus) said to them: "Go forth to every part of the world, and proclaim the Good News to the whole creation." (Mark 16:15 NEB)

PRAYER: May the Holy Spirit, O God, direct us in all our ways, and lead us into all truth. Thus fulfill in us also Christ's promise to His first disciples. In His name we pray. Amen.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mr. Charles Blanton, Jr.
Sikeston, Missouri
Dear Mr. Blanton,

The Sikeston Art League's exhibit owes a great deal of its success to the fine publicity the Standard was able to give us. We were, with your help, able to reach first the artist, to inform him of the coming show and then to let the public know when and where. The artist responded and we had more entries than in other years. The viewers turned out in force and in spite of conflicting events and the holiday weekend, we saw record crowds at the exhibit.

Thank you for adding so greatly to the success of the exhibit and for making my job of publicity easy.

Sincerely,
Barbara Smith

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I think it's mighty noble of you to want to buck up the women over 40 when they write and say they are pregnant (and ready to kill themselves) but have you ever stopped to think about how life looks to children who are born to women past 40? I know because I am one.

My father died before I graduated from high school -- of old age, of course. I never knew a grandparent. My nieces and nephews are just about my age. (My nephew went to school with me and it was pretty embarrassing to have that little runt call me auntie).

Please quit telling those old crows how great the "late dividend" can be. --ONE MYSELF.

Dear One: Those women don't ask whether or not they should have late babies. They are ALREADY pregnant! I try to make them feel good about it.

As for you -- wouldn't you rather have been born late than never?

Dear Ann Landers: I was adopted by a wonderful family when I was an infant. Mom and dad are the only parents I have ever known. They did not tell me I was adopted because I was a delicate child and they didn't want to add to my problem. A neighbor woman blurted it out one day and it had a terrible effect on me. Why, oh why, can't people keep their mouths shut?

Now I am going through the same thing again. We have three children and two are adopted. We have never told our adopted children about their history because we didn't want them to feel different from our blood child. Everything was going along fine until last week when we visited relatives in another state. My sister-in-law's children spilled the beans.

Now our adopted children are bitter and resentful. They say we tried to fool them and they are sullen and withdrawn.

Please, Ann Landers, tell people that it's up to the parents to tell or NOT to tell their children if they are adopted. Outsiders should shut up about it. --SALT LAKE MOTHER

Dear Mother: If you had grown up with the knowledge that you were adopted -- as you should have -- the neighbor's remark would have had no effect on you whatever. If your children had been told at an early age that they were chosen because they were very special and you wanted them very much, they would not feel betrayed now.

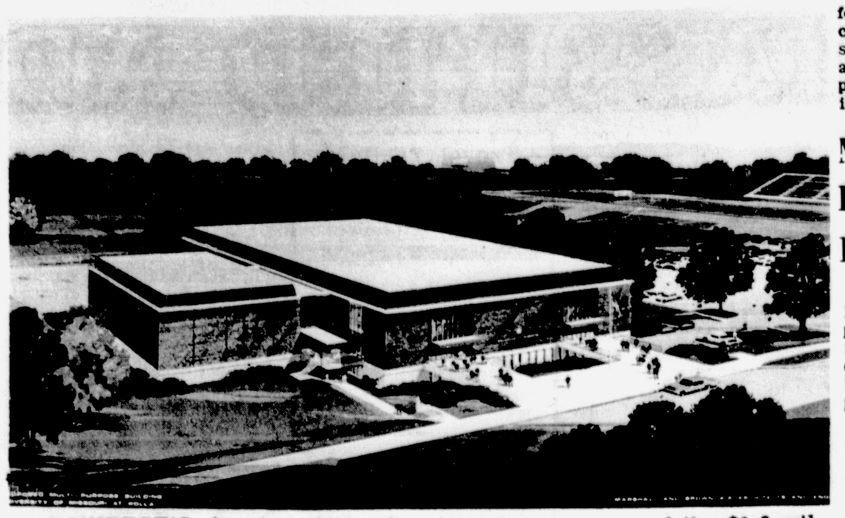

People talk - and they especially talk about other people. To expect the whole world to keep your secret was a foolish miscalculation. I have said this repeatedly in my column and I'll say it again. Adopted children should be told by their parents as soon as they learn to talk. This information, when offered by an outsider, can produce wounds that never heal.

Dear Ann: I'm 28 and engaged to marry a fine girl. Problem: I was divorced two years ago. No children. No alimony. No dirt. I want to tell my fiancee's parents BEFORE we marry. She says no. She feels they will take it better after we are married. What do you say? --R.R.

Dear R.R.: Tell them at once. And don't leave out any details for others to provide -- as they inevitably will if you give them the opportunity.

Awkward and self-conscious? Unsure of yourself? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key To Popularity," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

ARCHITECT'S drawing shows the planned appearance of the $1.8 million multi-purpose auditorium which will be constructed on the campus of the University of Missouri at Rolla to serve as an auditorium seating 6,400 and to double as an indoor athletic and physical education headquarters.

ROLLA, Mo., -- The Board of Curators at the University of Missouri at Rolla has authorized a $2 million expansion program to provide a multiple-purpose auditorium seating 6,400 and an adjacent football stadium having 4,000 permanent seats and press booth facilities. Chancellor Merl Baker said that advertisements for bids are expected to be published soon, although completion of the facilities may be a year or more away.

Funds for the facilities were provided by the 73rd General Assembly a year ago.

The multi-purpose building will provide a structure with a gross area of 90,000 square feet suitable for indoor athletic events, concerts, commencements, and even drama activities on a proposed 24 by 52-foot portable stage. The building will contain a basketball court 148 by 120 feet in size, constructed so that two practice courts can be utilized.

Marshall and Brown, Kansas City architectural and engineering firm, has prepared final plans for the structure that includes an auditorium-gymnasium with folding bleachers seating 2,400, folding chairs increasing capacity by 1,000, and a balcony seating for 3,000.

It will contain 10 offices, wrestling, weight, gymnastic, trainer and therapy rooms, locker rooms, three handball courts, a 42 by 75-foot swimming pool with a balcony seating 270, as well as basketball courts.

The multi-purpose auditorium will be located along Tenth Street and Bishop Avenue (U.S. 63), with the football stadium separated by parking areas that can serve both the stadium and the auditorium.

The ground floor of the auditorium will contain the locker, training and equipment rooms, showers, offices and facilities for gymnastics, handball and wrestling. The natatorium and gymnasium-auditorium, with concession stands, will be located on the first floor. The second floor will offer balcony seating for the gymnasium-auditorium as well as activiey space.

Beneath the stadium is planned equipment and storage facilities as well as team locker rooms. Atop the structure will be a two-story press box 50 feet long.

Cost estimates for the multi-purpose auditorium are approximately $1,826,000.

Specifications call for the ground floor to have two classrooms of 880 square feet; wrestling and weight rooms of 1,280 square feet; a gymnastics room of 1,620 square feet with a 22-foot ceiling; three handball courts with 22-foot ceilings, as well as locker rooms for athletics and physical education. Women's lockers, with shower and drying room areas and access to the swimming pool and playing floor, will be included on the main floor.

Mammoth Firm Files Petition In Bankruptcy

CHARLESTON -- Mammoth Producing Co. has filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in the Clare, Mich., feleral court district, it was reported here by a member of the company.

He explained the bankruptcy action in terms of clarifying an inter-company muddle and stated that further exploratory work was planned in this area as soon as the court action is completed.

The POWER of FAITH
By WOODI ISHMAEL

The Rev. Michio Imai, a United Church of Christ pastor, has conceived and established a unique ministry in his country, Japan. After witnessing the deep personal grief of a family who lost a member, a truck driver, in a fatal crash, he took positive steps towards prevention of highway accidents.

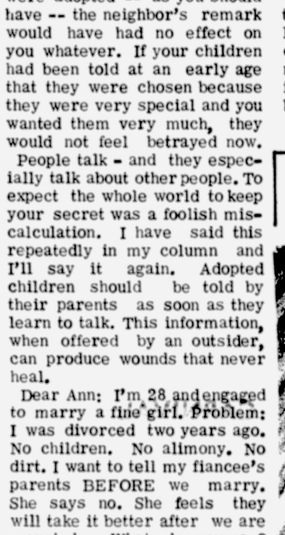

Fatigue, loneliness, strain and lack of sleep are enemies of long distance truckers.

In Japan, long distance truckers with small firms have driving assignments for as much as four days and nights without real rest. With the financial help of churches in Holland, Germany and Australia, through the World Council of Churches, he was able to establish a truckers mission. At Kakogawa on the highway that runs between Tokyo and Shimonoseki, he has built what is now known as The Traffic Labor Welfare Center. It consists of a restaurant for 50 people, hot baths, beds for 25 drivers, and an official counseling room.

Mrs. Imai runs the restaurant, helped by three children. Much of Mr. Imai's time is spent talking to and counseling the men. He has the help of two full time staff members and six part time counselors.

Today In U. S. History

Today is Friday, June 3, the 153rd day of 1966. There are 211 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1942, the Battle of Midway began when U.S. Navy patrol planes spotted a vast Japanese armada of 53 warships and 20 supply vessels in the Pacific some 700 miles west of Midway Island. A violent battle ensued in which four Japanese carriers, two heavy cruisers and two destroyers were sunk.

On this date in 1918, air mail service was inaugurated between New York, Boston and Montreal.

In 1940, German planes bombed Paris.

In 1940, the evacuation of Dunkerue was completed -- ending a never-to-be-forgotten chapter in military history.

In 1942, Japanese war planes, raided Dutch Harbor, Alaska.

In 1946, the president of the Soviet Union, Mikail Kalinin, died.

Ten years ago -- Soviet Communist party chief Nikita Khrushchev reportedly lashed out at Joseph Stalin during a speech in Prague, Czechoslovakia, declaring that Stalin almost caused a split with the Communist Chinese party.

Five years ago -- President John F. Kennedy began a two-day conference with Soviet Premier Khrushchev in Vienna. The President traveled to Vienna from Paris where he had met with French president De Gaulle.

One year ago -- The four-day, 62-orbit space flight of astronauts James McDivitt and Edward White aboard the Gemini 4 began. White was to make his historic 20-minute, walk in space.

Margaret Henrietta Pride, Sarah Margaret Green, Larry Robinson, Coy N. Nesbit, Bennie Lee Redmond, Leroy Green, James Anderson and Kathie McDonald, all of whom waived their preliminary hearings and were ordered held for the high court under bonds of $500.

The charges arose over their filing of false and inflated financial statements when making application for credit terms with Spiegal of Chicago for purchase of merchandise.

The mail order concern had reason to suspect some of the statements and turned them over to postal authorities, who made the investigation which brought the defendants under charge.

Charged with supplying liquor to a minor, Walter Alridge was fined $70, given six months in jail and placed on probation for a year when he offered a guilty plea.

For fishing without a permit, Barbara Richards was fined $11.

Careless and reckless driving charges brought fines of $20 against Dennis Wayen Boen and $15 against Frank Harris.

Having improper registration brought a fine of $15 against Associated Van Service, and the same amount was paid by Mary Lee Wilson and Frank Henry Willingham for being unlicensed operators.

For having no operator license Arthur R. Masterson paid a fine of $20.

During the holiday weekend, the State Highway Patrol set up a speed check on Route I-55 near here and as a result 47 persons appeared in the Magistrate Court or forfeited bonds on charges of excessive speed.

Greatest of the excessive speed fines were against Vernseal Larry and Herman Larry, each of whom paid $100.

Kennett Hospital Approved

KENNETT-- Dunklin County Memorial Hospital in Kennett has been officially approved by the U.S. Public Health Service for the Medicare program which begins in July.

Administrator James A. Fox reports that the official certification for participation in Medicare, dated May 27, was received by his office on Tuesday, May 31.

Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital at Hayti has not yet received the certification but has been informed that the hospital has been approved for the program, Administrator G. R. Freeman said this morning.

Approximately 150 hospitals in Missouri have applied for participation in the Medicare program. All of these were sent questionnaires early in May asking them to state what conditions existed regarding integration of staff, rooms, eating facilities, rest rooms, entrances and other facets of the hospital program.

There has been no indication that any hospital in the state would reject the civil rights requirements of Medicare, Dr. Carl C. Siegel, regional program director of the division of medical care administration of the Public Health Service, reports. But investigations are being made to determine by personal visits what conditions exist at the hospitals, he said.

series of rendezvous maneuvers.

Stafford made his first move in the chase just seconds after the Gemini went into orbit. He fired his jet thrusters to adjust the high point of the space ship's orbital path to about 172 miles.

As the rocket rose, capsule communicator Neil A. Armstrong, who commanded the Gemini 8 flight, told the astronauts they were "go for staging."

"Roger, understand we're go," Stafford replied.

When the second stage separated, Stafford saw the ignition of the thrusters on his spacecraft. "We have a beautiful fireball," he said. "It's fantastic."

When the 138-foot gantry was pulled away from the spacecraft this morning, and light broke into the capsule, Cernan murmured: "Oh, boy!" Stafford added, "It's a great day."

And it was. Proving that third time is charm, the Titan vaulted off its pad at 9:39 a.m. EDT, riding its blazing trail of hot gases to more than 100 miles out into space.

By the time the space ship settled into orbit, the target satellite had sped 428 miles ahead of them--and the chase was on. It was to terminate high over the western Pacific about 2:30 p.m.

This would be two hours less than the time the Gemini 8 astronauts took in March when they executed history's first space union with an Agena satellite.

During today's chase, command pilot Stafford was to maneuver Gemini 9 in much the same manner that Apollo astronauts will guide space ships leaving the moon for return journeys to earth.

All three days of the Gemini 9 flight plan were packed with important, action-filled tests. The plan was to be altered in flight, depending on whether or not the satellite remained locked in its shroud.

Still patiently optimistic despite past disappointments, Stafford, an Air Force lieutenant colonel, and Cernan, a Navy lieutenant commander, were reported "intent and ready" as they rode back today to Pad 19.

Twice before, the astronauts had sweated out the countdown, then dejectedly rode the slow elevator back to the ground when the mission was scrubbed.

As they entered the elevator today, they grinned broadly when they read this sign on the door:

"Tom and Gene: Notice, the down capability for this elevator has been removed. Let's have a good flight." It was signed, "The spacecraft crew."

As the new countdown moved along smoothly on schedule, the target satellite with which they will rendezvous in the skies was whirling around toward the Cape in its 29th orbit of the earth. It was launched Wednesday before the Gemini shot was washed out by communications failures.

"We sure hope they make it today," said astronaut Donald K. Slayton as Stafford and Cernan donned spacesuits for the flight. "It's been a struggle."

When the astronauts climbed out of the elevator to enter the spacecraft, they found a poem attached to it and signed by their backup crew, James A. Lowell Jr. and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr.

It read:

"We were kidding before.
"But not any more.
"Get yourselves into space.
"Or we'll take your place."

In their ride to Pad 19, Stafford and Cernan carried a large, mock match, saying it was to help them get off the ground. Stafford looked at Slayton and said, "Let's go do it."

Weather conditions were good at the Cape and around the world all tracking stations were ready to follow the most ambitious flight yet attempted in the U.S. man-to-the-moon program.

The astronauts were awakened shortly after 5 a.m., ate a big breakfast and took brief final physical examinations.

The countdown on their Gemini 9 spacecraft started on schedule at 3:33 a.m. The countdown on the Titan 2 started at 5:33 a.m. shortly after they arose.

The weather forecast called for scattered clouds with easterly winds at around 17 miles an hour.

"This is suitable for launch conditions," said a NASA spokesman.

If all remains on schedule, the thundering Titan 2 rocket will hurl the spacecraft into orbit at 9:39 a.m. At that moment, their target satellite would be whirling 185 miles above the Cape Kennedy area on its 29th circuit of the globe.

Until the astronauts catch the target they won't know whether they'll be able to dock with it. For only then will they be able to solve the mystery of whether a protective covering has jettisoned from the docking collar.

The postponements, adding up to 17 days, placed the launching attempt on an important anniversary in U.S. space flight. One year ago today Edward H. White II became the first American to walk in space as he stepped outside the Gemini 4 craft manned by James A. McDivitt.

Cernan plans to extend man's knowledge in this exciting and important field Saturday by taking a 2½-hour celestial stroll, propelling himself about with a rocket-powered back pack.

The space twins were to chase the satellite -- called ATDA, for Augmented Target Docking Adapter -- at 17,500 miles an hour over a 76,000-mile course, catching it four hours later high above the western Pacific Ocean.

When they are within eyesight of the barrel-shaped ATDA they will be able to determine whether the shroud is on or off. The order in which they exercise various assignments will depend on the shroud.

This element of suspense was added to the flight when ground stations Wednesday received an indication that the ATDA shroud did not eject as planned after the rocket pushed up through the heavy portion of the earth's atmosphere.

In the cross of Christ excess in men is met by excess in God; excess of evil is mastered by excess of love.

The charges arose over their filing of false and inflated financial statements when making application for credit terms with Spiegal of Chicago for purchase of merchandise.

The mail order concern had reason to suspect some of the statements and turned them over to postal authorities, who made the investigation which brought the defendants under charge.

Charged with supplying liquor to a minor, Walter Alridge was fined $70, given six months in jail and placed on probation for a year when he offered a guilty plea.

For fishing without a permit, Barbara Richards was fined $11.

Having improper registration brought a fine of $15 against Associated Van Service, and the same amount was paid by Mary Lee Wilson and Frank Henry Willingham for being unlicensed operators.

For having no operator license Arthur R. Masterson paid a fine of $20.

During the holiday weekend, the State Highway Patrol set up a speed check on Route I-55 near here and as a result 47 persons appeared in the Magistrate Court or forfeited bonds on charges of excessive speed.

Greatest of the excessive speed fines were against Vernseal Larry and Herman Larry, each of whom paid $100.

Kennett Hospital Approved

KENNETT-- Dunklin County Memorial Hospital in Kennett has been officially approved by the U.S. Public Health Service for the Medicare program which begins in July.

Administrator James A. Fox reports that the official certification for participation in Medicare, dated May 27, was received by his office on Tuesday, May 31.

Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital at Hayti has not yet received the certification but has been informed that the hospital has been approved for the program, Administrator G. R. Freeman said this morning.

Approximately 150 hospitals in Missouri have applied for participation in the Medicare program. All of these were sent questionnaires early in May asking them to state what conditions existed regarding integration of staff, rooms, eating facilities, rest rooms, entrances and other facets of the hospital program.

There has been no indication that any hospital in the state would reject the civil rights requirements of Medicare, Dr. Carl C. Siegel, regional program director of the division of medical care administration of the Public Health Service, reports. But investigations are being made to determine by personal visits what conditions exist at the hospitals, he said.

series of rendezvous maneuvers.

Stafford made his first move in the chase just seconds after the Gemini went into orbit. He fired his jet thrusters to adjust the high point of the space ship's orbital path to about 172 miles.

As the rocket rose, capsule communicator Neil A. Armstrong, who commanded the Gemini 8 flight, told the astronauts they were "go for staging."

"Roger, understand we're go," Stafford replied.

When the second stage separated, Stafford saw the ignition of the thrusters on his spacecraft. "We have a beautiful fireball," he said. "It's fantastic."

When the 138-foot gantry was pulled away from the spacecraft this morning, and light broke into the capsule, Cernan murmured: "Oh, boy!" Stafford added, "It's a great day."

And it was. Proving that third time is charm, the Titan vaulted off its pad at 9:39 a.m. EDT, riding its blazing trail of hot gases to more than 100 miles out into space.

By the time the space ship settled into orbit, the target satellite had sped 428 miles ahead of them--and the chase was on. It was to terminate high over the western Pacific about 2:30 p.m.

This would be two hours less than the time the Gemini 8 astronauts took in March when they executed history's first space union with an Agena satellite.

During today's chase, command pilot Stafford was to maneuver Gemini 9 in much the same manner that Apollo astronauts will guide space ships leaving the moon for return journeys to earth.

All three days of the Gemini 9 flight plan were packed with important, action-filled tests. The plan was to be altered in flight, depending on whether or not the satellite remained locked in its shroud.

Still patiently optimistic despite past disappointments, Stafford, an Air Force lieutenant colonel, and Cernan, a Navy lieutenant commander, were reported "intent and ready" as they rode back today to Pad 19.

Twice before, the astronauts had sweated out the countdown, then dejectedly rode the slow elevator back to the ground when the mission was scrubbed.

As they entered the elevator today, they grinned broadly when they read this sign on the door:

"Tom and Gene: Notice, the down capability for this elevator has been removed. Let's have a good flight." It was signed, "The spacecraft crew."

As the new countdown moved along smoothly on schedule, the target satellite with which they will rendezvous in the skies was whirling around toward the Cape in its 29th orbit of the earth. It was launched Wednesday before the Gemini shot was washed out by communications failures.

"We sure hope they make it today," said astronaut Donald K. Slayton as Stafford and Cernan donned spacesuits for the flight. "It's been a struggle."

When the astronauts climbed out of the elevator to enter the spacecraft, they found a poem attached to it and signed by their backup crew, James A. Lowell Jr. and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr.

It read:

"We were kidding before.
"But not any more.
"Get yourselves into space.
"Or we'll take your place."

In their ride to Pad 19, Stafford and Cernan carried a large, mock match, saying it was to help them get off the ground. Stafford looked at Slayton and said, "Let's go do it."

Weather conditions were good at the Cape and around the world all tracking stations were ready to follow the most ambitious flight yet attempted in the U.S. man-to-the-moon program.

The astronauts were awakened shortly after 5 a.m., ate a big breakfast and took brief final physical examinations.

The countdown on their Gemini 9 spacecraft started on schedule at 3:33 a.m. The countdown on the Titan 2 started at 5:33 a.m. shortly after they arose.

The weather forecast called for scattered clouds with easterly winds at around 17 miles an hour.

"This is suitable for launch conditions," said a NASA spokesman.

If all remains on schedule, the thundering Titan 2 rocket will hurl the spacecraft into orbit at 9:39 a.m. At that moment, their target satellite would be whirling 185 miles above the Cape Kennedy area on its 29th circuit of the globe.

Until the astronauts catch the target they won't know whether they'll be able to dock with it. For only then will they be able to solve the mystery of whether a protective covering has jettisoned from the docking collar.

The postponements, adding up to 17 days, placed the launching attempt on an important anniversary in U.S. space flight. One year ago today Edward H. White II became the first American to walk in space as he stepped outside the Gemini 4 craft manned by James A. McDivitt.

Cernan plans to extend man's knowledge in this exciting and important field Saturday by taking a 2½-hour celestial stroll, propelling himself about with a rocket-powered back pack.

The space twins were to chase the satellite -- called ATDA, for Augmented Target Docking Adapter -- at 17,500 miles an hour over a 76,000-mile course, catching it four hours later high above the western Pacific Ocean.

When they are within eyesight of the barrel-shaped ATDA they will be able to determine whether the shroud is on or off. The order in which they exercise various assignments will depend on the shroud.

This element of suspense was added to the flight when ground stations Wednesday received an indication that the ATDA shroud did not eject as planned after the rocket pushed up through the heavy portion of the earth's atmosphere.
